Ostrowski's 2-Run Homer Gives Nats 5-4 Victory

Griffs Snap 7-Game Loss Streak on Only 4 Hits; Hudson Beats Wynn for 7th Win

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

John Ostrowski clubbed that seven-game losing streak of the Nats into a thing of the past last night with a nick-of-time home run swat that wrested a 5-4 game from the Cleveland Indians.

The Nats won a ball game on a night when they made only four hits and their eighth straight defeat was apparently engulfing them when Ostrowski, the newcomer from Chicago, belted his two-run homer in the eighth.

With the Nats trailing, 4-3, and their 17,526 fans despairing, Irv Noren opened the eighth with a single to right. Bucky Harris spurned the sacrifice bunt, and Sherry Robertson flied out to left field. It was on the next pitch that Ostrowski lined his decisive homer into the seats in left field.

That blow left Early Wynn a beaten pitcher and raised Sid Hudson to the status of the winner despite the 10 hits he allowed, half of them for extra bases.

4th of Year, 3 Here

Ostrowski's wallop was his fourth homer over the season—three of them in Griffith Stadium. It barely cleared the shallow screen barrier in left field, and rebounded out of the seats but Umpire Bill Summers was already waving him around the bases before the Indians could dispute the blow.

Hudson had to labor to preserve his newly-won lead in the ninth after Bob Kennedy opened up wtih a single to center with the heavy end of the Indians' batting order due at the plate. But he breezed past Luke Easter and Larry Doby, who were held to harmless flies, and then lured Al Rosen into popping up.

For the Nats, it was their first dividend on the deal they made eight games ago with the White Sox—their first victory, and won by Tradee Ostrowski who figured in the transaction.

The Indians were giving Hudson trouble all night with their extra base swats, with Lou Boudreau banging a double and triple that figured in runs, and later singling home the run that put the Indians ahead, 4-3, in the eighth.

The Nats, though, were getting sensational mileage out of their meager hits off Wynn. They needed only one blow, Robertson's single to right, to take a 1-0 lead in the first inning after Yost walked and stole second.

Boudreau set the tying run in motion for the Indians in the second with a double against the left field wall that was fluffed by Eddie Stewart who took a header while giving chase. Joe Gordon's single to center immediately scored Boudreau, but Cass Michaels limited the damage by starting a double play on Hegan's grounder.

Wynn, himself, walloped a three-bagger off the right field wall with

B-29 Falls in Sea Off British Base; 1 Dead, 8 Missing

London, June 7 (AP).—A U. S. Air Force B-29 Superfortress bomber plunged into the North Sea off the English coast tonight.

Two survivors and the body of one victim of the crash were reported picked up. Eight other airmen are missing.

The bomber was on a training flight from its English base at Sculthorpe. It is one of a group of U. S. bombers stationed in Britain for training purposes.

Roosevelt and Warren Win Governorship Nominations

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, will battle California's popular two-term Governor, Earl Warren, for that post in November.

Warren almost doubled the vote of Roosevelt in both party primaries yesterday—but failed to repeat his amazing feat of 1946 when he won both party nominations in the primary.

The Governor, 1948 vice presidential nominee of the Republican Party, scored an overwhelming triumph over the crossfiling Roosevelt on the GOP side. On the Democratic side, while making a good showing, his chances of overtaking Roosevelt faded when the slow count reached the two-thirds point. Roosevelt by then had built up a steadily increasing lead well past 100,000.

The returns:

Democratic Governor: 12,573 precincts out of 18,022: Roosevelt, 655,028; Warren, 507,665. Roosevelt advantage more than 145,000.

Republican Governor: Precincts 12,773: Warren, 758,197; Roosevelt, 83,197.

Republican Senator: Precincts 9857: Representative Richard Nixon, 373,400; Representative Helen Gahagen Douglas, 86,316; Manchester Boddy, 77,597.

Democratic Senator: Precincts 9810: Douglas, 377,803; Boddy, 181,712; Nixon, 172,331.

Roosevelt in Lead Early

From the first hours in the tedious counting of two-party candidacies—a filing system countenanced by the direct primary law—Roosevelt, son of the late President Franklin Roosevelt, held command in the Democratic field. There was never any contest on the GOP ticket.

Thus Warren fashioned a sizable total vote that foretold a hard fight for Roosevelt in the November election.

However, Roosevelt has a big margin in registration: 2,862,000 Democrats to 1,826,000 Republicans.

In the State's other top contest of national interest, Representative Nixon, Republican of Whittier, and Representative Douglas, Democrat of Los Angeles, won their own party nominations. But neither could win both for a quick election.

The November Senatorial contest will select a successor to veteran Senator Sheridan Downey, Democrat, whose ill health forced him to give up his reelection drive. He indorsed Boddy, who

Crime Group Hears Molasky On Tuesday

Senate Unit to Quiz St. Louis Operator on Wire Connections

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A St. Louis race wire operator will testify Tuesday before the Senate Crime Committee on his connections with Western Union and Continental Press.

He is William Molasky, vice president of Pioneer News Service and head of Pierce Building News Co., distributor of magazines, newspapers and racing scratch sheets. What the committee wants to know is what other interests he has.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently revealed that Molasky and his wife own Western Union stock valued at more than $300,000. One report was that he was the firm's biggest individual stockholder. He defended the investment as a legitimate business transaction.

Western Union wires are leased by the Continental Press Service, the Nation-wide racing wire. A Continental official last month told a Senate Commerce subcommittee that one of its clients was Pioneer News and that Molasky was the man they dealt with. After the Continental official said Molasky had "a very high reputation," Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) brought out the embarrassing fact that he once served a year and a day for income tax evasion.

The Post-Dispatch called Molasky an "overlord" of racing news distribution. He volunteered to testify after the story of his interest in Western Union was printed.

The connection between betting and Western Union got somewhat closer this week with the raid by Missouri State police on a St. Louis office. Indications were found that gamblers had offered Western Union office managers 25 percent cut for handling bets by wire.

U. of Md. to Ask $3.5 Million To Expand Its Negro Branch

Princess Anne, Md., June 7 (AP).—The University of Maryland's board of regents voted today to ask the State for $3,500,000 for new construction at the university's branch here.

It said in a statement that "it is especially mindful of the recent decision of the Supreme Court that the provision of "equal facilities" must in every sense be equal.

"The board is further mindful that it is useless for the State to say that it is providing equal facilities (for Negroes) unless it makes financial provisions to do so."

The board of regents would spend the $3,500,000 it wants for Princess Anne for new dormitories, an athletic field, a laundry, barns and poultry plants, a library and books to stock it, additional classroom buildings, a field house, a student activities building, a warehouse and other structures.

A total of $90,000 would be spent for additional land, and $45,000 for landscaping and roads.

The board also:

Authorized initial steps toward an appeal to the Supreme Court of the McCready case. In that case, the State Court of Appeals ordered the university to admit Miss Esther McCready, a Negro, to its school of nursing.

Floor Battle By Senator To Continue

Expects to Speak 'As Long as I Can Stand'; Wants House To Act First on Bill

Local Rent Fight

Passage Predicted

A one-man filibuster against extension of Federal rent controls yesterday tied up the Senate for 3 hours and 13 minutes and threatened to resume again later today.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) said his purpose is to block Senate action on the temporary extension until the more closely divided House has a chance to vote first.

"I expect to speak for as long as I can stand up, or for as long as is necessary," the GOP's leading rent control foe told the Senate.

Controls Die June 30

Controls expire the last of this month. The Federal bill extends them through December 31, 1950, with additional authority for local communities to act independently to extend them another six months.

Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) announced he will offer an amendment tying a District rent control extension to the Federal bill. Like the national measure, it would continue present controls through 1950, and permit the District Commissioners to order an additional six months extension.

Cain opened his marathon attack on the Federal bill after a Senate Democratic Party conference backed up Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas' call for a

Willis Smith Asks June 24 Runoff in N. C. Senate Race

Raleigh, N. C., June 7 (U.P.).—Attorney Willis Smith, who trailed Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.) by 53,383 votes in the May 27 primary race for the Senate, announced today he is demanding a runoff primary June 24.

The announcement answered a question which had been puzzling North Carolina voters more than a week since primary returns showed that Graham would lead but would not gain a majority of all the votes cast.

The announcement also assured North Carolina of resumption of the bitter campaigning in the fight between the conservative corporation lawyer and the liberal Graham.

Headquarters for both candidates had been at the ready since the first primary, awaiting Smith's decision. A decision not to call for the runoff would have made Graham the Democratic nominee for the Senate. In North Carolina, the Democratic nomination amounts to election.

Marshall Backs Arms Aid Bill

For U. S. to Leave Europe Impotent Would Be Fatal, General Asserts

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. George C. Marshall yesterday described as wholly "wrong" and much more costly an alternative American foreign policy advocated by critics of the Administration's military aid program.

Appearing in support of the second-year $1,222,500,000 arms assistance plan, the former Secretary of State and wartime Army chief declared it would be "fatal" to abandon such aid now.

Marshall was asked by Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) for his view on a proposed policy which would provide: (1) ending military assistance to the non-Communist world; (2) a guarantee that we'd fight Russia if she attacked any free nation; (3) arming the United Statees "to the teeth."

The suggested alternative closely resembles the position taken by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) and some other congressional veterans of both parties who lean toward isolationism.

"To arm to the teeth and leave Western Europe impotent is wrong—psychologically and militarily wrong and just generally wrong," replied Marshall.

He estimated that such a course would require an annual budget of "well over 30 billion dollars a year"—double the present expenditures for defense and foreign aid.

Such a "negative" attitude would be "fatal," Marshall declared. Europe soon would be overrun and it would be "only a question of time before Latin America and the Caribbean would be involved," said the soldier-statesman.

"We then could have airplanes with a tremendous radius of action and warships that could control the seas but everywhere on land we would be impotent," he stated, adding that large armies would be of little use to us "isolated from the world."

"Then it is not a choice of the present cost and less but the present cost or more?" asked Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), referring to Marshall's estimate of a 30-billion-dollar military budget in a world without American allies. The general agreed.

Marshall appeared before the House Armed Services Committee during the morning in open session, and then went behind closed doors to give his views to the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees.

He was asked to comment on suggestions about rearming Germany but declined to "enter into that." On Tuesday, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, declared a rearmed Germany would bolster the defenses of the Western world, when asked a similar question. He emphasized he was speaking from a "strictly military viewpoint."

When questioned about the Bradley statement yesterday at his press conference, Secretary of State Dean Acheson said the United States always has opposed the rearmament of Germany and still does.

Acheson said he understood Bradley was not advocating that Germany be rearmed but merely giving a military answer to a military question.

The Secretary of State then pointed out that the United States has protested the establishment of a so-called police force in Russian-

Assurance of New U. S. Arms Greeted by Cheers in France

Paris, June 7 (NYHT).—French military circles expressed enthusiasm today for the statement by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson that western Europe would need only relatively small ground forces once the continent was equipped with the most modern American arms.

For the men who are planning national defense with the weak resources at hand, it was the first concrete indication that the United States is preparing to entrust its latest weapons—short of the atomic bomb—to France and the other Atlantic Pact partners.

As understood here, Johnson's statement Monday before the joint session of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Forces Committees meant there would be sufficient weapons of the latest quality to enable France to fight on in the event of any attack and stage a defense beyond receiving the first blow.

Government quarters pointed out that military aid on this scale also would strike an important political blow. According to their view, such aid would eliminate the incipient French tendency toward neutrality.

Despite the signing of the Atlantic Pact and the arrival of the first American 1945 model arms under the military defense aid program, many Frenchmen have continued to regard their defense role as that of a dismally prepared ..ation set up in the potential front line and ready for sacrifice but not equipped for an adequate de- ..se effort.

Johnson's views, plus those giv-

Civilian Replaces Kotikov as Soviet Chief in Berlin

Berlin, June 7 (U.P.).—The Russians have shifted local control of the city of Berlin and the provincial areas of East Germany from military to civilian leaders, it was disclosed tonight.

The Soviet-controlled news agency ADN announced that Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov had been removed as commandant for Berlin and replaced by a civilian commissioner, Sergei Alexeijevitsch Dengin. Dengin will have the title of Soviet Control Commissioner for Berlin.

Allied sources said they believed the changes meant no decided change in Russia's policy

Witness Names Vardaman in Amerasia Case

Former White House Aide 'Never Heard' Of Case in 1945

By The Associated Press

James K. Vardaman, one-time naval aide to President Truman, reportedly was named to Senate investigators yesterday as the man who may have tried to delay prosecution in the 1945 Amerasia secret documents case.

Vardaman quickly and emphatically denied it. He is now a member of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

"I had just come back to this country from the initial assault on Okinawa when the Amerasia case first broke," Vardaman told the Associated Press.

"I'd never heard of the case, and I never discussed it with anyone at the White House or anywhere else. I didn't know a thing about it. Mine was purely an administrative job of running the war map room in the White House."

Holmes Called Informant

Authoritative informants said Brig. Gen. Julius Holmes, an assistant Secretary of State at the time of the Amerasia arrests, told a Senate inquiry committee today his best recollection is that Vardaman asked that the prosecution be delayed.

Holmes also testified that as soon as President Truman heard of the delay maneuver, he quashed it and ordered vigorous action in the case.

"I never heard of Holmes," Vardaman told a reporter tonight. "Under no stretch of White House policy would such a case have been referred to my office.

"It might have been referred to the chief of staff, but not to me. I never discussed it with Admiral Leahy (the President's personal chief of staff during the war) or anyone else."

Acheson Chills Lie Peace Talk Proposal

Insists Only Way To Achieve It Is Unity, Strength in Non-Soviet World

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson said yesterday that the only way to get real peace with Russia was to push ahead toward unity and strength in the non-Soviet world.

Respectfully but firmly he disputed the belief of Trygve Lie, Secretary-General of the United Nations, that negotiations with the Soviet Union were possible now.

"There is no magic which can remove suddenly the tensions that now exist," Acheson said in a statement read at his weekly press conference.

"As I have said before, the free nations of the world have a hard task ahead of them so long as the Soviet government continues its present policies. We can't afford to wait and merely hope that those policies will change.

Must Create Strength

"We must carry forward in our own determination to create situations of strength in the free world because this is the only basis on which lasting agreement with the Soviet government is possible.

"This, in our judgment, is the road to peace, and because we believe it to be the road to peace it is the road which we are following. This road does not lead away from negotiation; it leads to the kind of negotiation which may prove fruitful."

The tone of the Acheson statement was more striking than the substance, and in at least two ways:

1. The Secretary seemed unusually anxious to show that the American goal was peace, and that American policy-makers were by no means cold to the idea of easing East-West tensions. In this he was indirectly answering Tuesday's appeal by seven Senators and four Representatives for a reduction of armaments.

Unusually Polite to Lie

(2) He was unusually polite in his reference to Lie, who came back recently from a visit to Moscow and western European capitals. Before Lie started his journey he visited the State Department, saw only a few subordinate officials, and was not even escorted to the door when he left the building.

Yesterday Acheson said he thought it was "proper" for Lie as Secretary-General "to take whatever steps he thinks desirable in his effort to reduce the existing tensions in the world."

"The Secretary General of the United Nations occupies a unique position and deserves our encouragement and support," he said, and he repeated that the U. N. was still a "primary factor" in American policy.

Next Acheson dealt with the 10 areas of possible negotiation which Lie outlined in his memorandum left with President Truman before going to Moscow. The United

3 Volunteers Held For Arson in 13 Fires They Fought

Prince Georges County detectives last night arrested three volunteer firemen who were accused of starting 13 fires which they helped put out.

Accused of arson, and placed under $2500 bond, were Willy D. Grusholt, 19, Forestville, and William T. Tippett, 20, of Suitland. The third person is a 16-year-old youth who will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

Detective Wilson J. Purdy of Marlboro said the trio admitted tossing gasoline on and igniting 13 buildings—including three full tobacco barns, and the Odd Fellows Hall in Forestville—then joining the fight to quench the flames.

All the fires occurred in Forestville-Melwood area between April 8 and May 31, and resulted in more than $10,000 damage, Purdy said. Investigation, stimulated by panicky farmers, and "a little luck" resulted in the arrests, Purdy said.

Truman Asks Nation's Prayers In Lutheran Parley Address

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked for the "prayers and support" of the Nation's devout in his effort to obtain peace based on "the moral code in which we all believe."

He spoke briefly at the ninety-first annual convention of the Augustana Lutheran Church, at Augustana Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw.

"Never in the history of the country has a servant of the people—and that is what the President is—needed your support and your prayers as does the present occupant of the White House," Mr. Truman said.

"No man, no matter how great or how informed he may be, is capable of filling the Presidency of the United States in the manner in which it ought to be done," he told the Lutherans.

"All any man can do is to do as best he can in the interests of all the people of the United States. He is a servant of all the people of the United States, and the United States is a servant of all the people in the world."

Speaking extemporaneously, the President asserted there is "no reason in the world for disagreements between peoples.

"There is room enough, there are resources enough, for everybody to live at peace with everybody else."

The church, with its prayers and teachings of the moral code, is the greatest support that a free government can have, the President continued. The United States is faced with great responsibilities, he said.

"We have become the leaders of the moral forces of the world, the leaders who believe that the Sermon on the Mount means what it says, the leaders of that part of the world which believes that the law is the God-given law under which we live, that our traditions

Eden Asks Divorce; Suit Undefended

London, June 7 (AP).—Anthony Eden, former Foreign Minister of Britain and now No. 2 man in the Conservative Party, is suing for divorce.

The case is undefended and grounds were not listed.

Eden, now a handsome, gray-haired 53, married Beatrice Helen Beckett in 1923. She was the daughter of Sir Gervase Beckett.

They had two sons. The elder, Pilot Officer Simon Eden, was killed in action in Burma in 1945. The younger is a college student.

Mrs. Eden has spent most of the last few years abroad.

$10,000 Voted to Investigate Perversion in U. S. Agencies

The Senate yesterday voted $10,000 for an investigation of homosexuals and other perverts in Government jobs.

It turned the funds over to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department, with instructions to report results of the inquiry by January 31, 1951.

These actions resulted from Senate adoption of a resolution which stemmed from testimony by a Metropolitan Police officer that there are an estimated 5000 homosexuals in Washington, 75 percent of them in Government service.

The officer who gave the estimate was Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the police vice squad.

Demands for the full scale probe of sex deviates in Government jobs were taken up in turn by the District Appropriations Subcommittee, to which Blick testified, by the Expenditures Committee, and finally by the Senate Rules Committee.

Members said a meeting of the Expenditures Committee probably will be held in the next few days to assign the investigation project to the subcommittee headed by Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.).

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) is a member of the Hoey subcommittee, but has indicated he will not serve in the investigation. Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.) may be assigned to McCarthy's place.

D. C. Rent Control Extension Sought

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) yesterday prepared a plan to tie extension of District rent control to the national rent extension bill now in Senate debate.

Neely, who heads the Senate District committee, said he expects today to file in the Senate an amendment to the national rent bill that would do these things for the separate District rent control law:

1. Extend it through the end of 1950 and give statutory basis for a further 6-month extension by order of the District Commissioners. This would treat the District much like other cities would be treated by the national rent bill—the six-month extension of the law, with the extra six months to be obtained through affirmative action of the local community or its governing body.

2. Decontrol nonhousekeeping furnished rooms effective June 30, a proposal that has the backing of the District Commissioners and Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell. June 30 is the date the existing District rent control law would expire, unless Congress acts to extend it.

3. Provide for landlords seeking District rent increases to base their cases on the best available evidence regarding facts and conditions for the period January 1, 1941 to July 1, 1945. This would soften present requirements for certain original records in such cases. It has the backing of Cogswell and the Commissioners.

The idea of letting the Commissioners decide whether there is to be a second six months of rent control parallels the provision in the national bill.

In other cities and towns, the second six months' extension also could be obtained by popular referendum—a parallel that could not be applied under the present voteless District setup.

While Neely's formula would make the extension of District controls the same in timing as other areas, it would leave the District with a rent control law separate from the rest of the Nation.

When the Neely plan might reach a Senate vote hinged on developments as to the national rent control bill, threatened yesterday in its first day of debate with an extended filibuster by opponents.

Meanwhile, the District Commissioners proposal for another year of District controls, with decontrol June 30 of nonhousekeeping furnished rooms, will be the subject of a House hearing at 10 a. m. today. It will be conducted by the District Judiciary Subcommittee headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.). It will be in Room 445 Old House Office Building.

Can't Afford Intolerance, Barkley Says

Vice President Alben W. Barkley last night warned that forces in the world today threaten "to undermine the foundations of our unity at a time when we cannot afford the luxury of entertaining bigotry, intolerance and narrow-minded feuds about men and women who do not believe as we do."

The Vice President spoke at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel citing Oscar Chapman, Interior Secretary, for his "contribution to the survival of freedom in our times." The dinner was sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and attended by more than 300.

Secretary Chapman, in accepting the citation, declared that the "future security of ourselves and the world may well rest upon the the quality aof moral leadership our Nation demonstrates to the world in the immediate future."

Vice President Barkley, in the principal address, challenged his listeners with the statement that there is "still much more to be accomplished" in the area of tolerance and understanding.

"There never was a time in the history of our nation when we needed greater unity than at this hour," he said.

Senate Backs Monument For Brumidi

The Senate yesterday approved and returned to the House a bill to place a monument at the grave of Constantino Brumidi in Glenwood Cemetery here.

Brumidi was an Italian artist who decorated many parts of the Capitol. He died of injuries suffered when he fell from a scaffold while he was painting the frieze in the Capitol rotunda in 1880. The frieze still is unfinished. House aproved the monument bill and fixed the figure of $200 for carrying out the proposal.

Senate approval of the Brumidi monument was given by a voice vote at the request of Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) of the Rules and Administration Committee.

The Senate also approved two other Rules Committee resolutions presented by Hayden, and sent them to the House. One transfers from the Capitol to the Smithsonian Institution a plaster cast of a statue of George Washington, now in the Capitol rotunda. A bronze of the same statue also is in the rotunda. The second resolution transfers from the Capitol to the Interior Department a painting of "the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone."

A bill to advance the effective date of the fifth-day week for firemen is among a dozen District measures slated for Senate action today.

Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) majority majority leader, announced yesterday a plan to make Thursday's Senate business the calling of its calendar, which includes the District legislation.

Court Sustains Suit Against Gas Rate Increase

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court yesterday refused to throw out a suit attacking the November gas rate boost filed by the Federation of Citizens Associations and the chairman of its public utilities committee, Vernon A. Baker.

Baker charged the Public Utilities Commission had committed seven major errors in granting a 6.14 percent rate hike to the Washington Gas Light Co. He asked that the PUC decision be vacated.

Lloyd Harrison, PUC attorney, countercharged that Baker had not attacked the facts on which the commission made its decision, and asked Judge Goldsborough for a summary judgment in favor of the PUC.

Goldsborough ruled that if Baker's charges were true the PUC decision was "arbitrary and capricious," and ordered the case to proceed on its merits at 10 a. m. today.

Baker alleged the PUC erred in these respects:

(1) In allowing the company to include $1,744,000 worth of abandoned property in the 32-million-dollar rate base on which the PUC said the company was entitled to a 6-percent return.

3. In allowing the company to include $2,797,000 in this rate base, representing the "unamortized costs" of converting consumer appliances to handle natural, instead of manufactured, gas.

Baker said a utility is entitled to a fair return only on that property which is "used and useful."

3. In allowing as an "operating revenue deduction," $200,000, representing 10 percent of the unamortized cost of the abandoned property.

4. In allowing "an accelerated depreciation," of $326,344 on the company's East Station, because, Baker said, he company planned to abandon the plant in 10 years. Normal depreciation, Baker said, is 2.1 percent.

5. In allowing the company to amortize the three-million-dollar cost of conversion to natural gas in 10 years. Baker suggested a minimum of 15.

Called Discriminatory

6. The approved rates are discriminatory among various classes of consumers, Baker charged, as bill will increase from 1.78 percent to 8.1 percent.

7. The PUC decision makes the rate increase retroactive, and thus illegal, for as much as 24 days, Baker said. The decision was signed November 7, he said, to be effective with meter readings made on or after November 16. Since meters are read once every 30 days, Baker said that meters read on November 16 would include gas consumed as much as 24 days before the rate hike was approved.

Lot Property Of Paper, Court Rules

Judge Edward M. Curran ruled yesterday that the $200,000 parking lot adjacent to the Times-Herald Building is an asset of the newspaper corporation.

The District Court jurist made the decision after he was asked by the beneficiaries under the will of the late publisher, Eleanor Patterson, to determine the status of the property.

Certain beneficiaries said the property should be declared part of the residuum of the estate rather than as part of the newspaper business which was bequeathed to seven key employes and later sold to the present ownership.

Speaking for the newspaper owners, Attorney Louis Caldwell contended the lot was "absolutely essential to the conduct of the business."

A special master was appointed by Judge Curran to determine several other questions raised as to the will by beneficiaries under it.

400 Tenants of Westchester Battle Cooperative Project

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

A plan to convert the plush Westchester Apartments to a cooperative was met by a concerted boo and a demand for extension of rent control at a mass meeting of tenants last night in the sunken garden of the building at 39th st. and Cathedral ave. nw.

More than 400 occupants of the 553-unit establishment, which houses Cabinet members and Congressmen, crowded into the garden to hear the plan explained.

A committee formed to spearhead the tenant reaction included Alvin Newmyer, sr., attorney, chairman; Raymond M. Foley, head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency; Municipal Judges George D. Neilson and Walter J. Casey; Maj. Gen. A. B. Quinton, jr.; Brig. Gen. A. C. Dalton; Columnist Constantine Brown.

Also Meredith M. Daubin, J. M. Daiger, Joseph C. McHale, Jules C. Ricker, Thomas Hughes, George C. Vournas and Robert A. Philipson.

Albert Philipson, a member of Newmyer's firm, who explained the plan, told the meeting that 65 percent of the tenants must agree before the project can be converted under the current rent control law.

If the law expires June 30, one of the protesting tenants said, "we're all dead ducks." In that case, cooperative sales could be made with normal restrictions against evictions.

After the meeting the committee appointed Vournas, General Quinton, and Alvin Newmyer, jr., to attend a House District Judiciary Subcommitte ehearing today and argue for continued rent control.

Robert Philipson was appointed to prepare a written summary of the pros and cons of the cooperative plan. The full committee will meet again Monday.

Option To Buy Signed

Albert Philipson reported that on May 23, the Realest Corp., current landlord, signed a contract giving the Westchester Cooperative, Inc., a Delaware corporation, an option to buy the apartments. The option expires August 1.

The cooperative agreed to pay $7,500,000 for the property, one-tenth in cash, the rest in notes. The property is currently carried on the District tax assessor's rolls at $3,782,088.

A brochure issued yesterday informed tenants that for present rents in the range of $94.50—$103.25, the cash payment would be $1190, and an estimated annual "assessment" of $13.32. For taxpayers in the "25 percent bracket," the brochure estimated a potential tax saving of $139 56 per year.

speed-up in an effort to adjourn Congress by July 31.

Conceding it was "problematic" whether the Senate could make it, Lucas put rent controls at the top o fa list of five major measures Democrats plan to put through Congress before adjournment.

The other four are social security expansion, scheduled to come up right after rent control extension, the House-approved selective service extension, authority for a second year of mutual defense aid, and last but toughest, the House-passed omnibus appropriation bill.

Significantly, neither the House-bogged tax bill nor authority for the United States to join the International Trade organization were on Lucas' list.

Right after the party conference, Lucas succeeded in calling up the rent control extension over Cain's objections. Cain charged "political expediency" prompted the move. Later (at 3:25 p. m.) Cain took the floor and announced he would speak until he dropped.

Recess Agreement Reached

Actually, Cain's first filibuster shift lasted only until 6:18 p. m. Before he sat down, Maybank and Acting Senate leader Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.) worked out a unanimous consent agreement that permitted the Senate to recess overnight without impairing Cain's right to resume his filibuster when the Senate resumes consideration of the bill.

At noon today, Lucas plans to lay the rent-control bill aside for a few hours to permit a long-proposed call on bills on the Senate consent calendar. Cain plans to take the floor again as soon as the calendar call is over.

The House plans to call up a similar rent control bill Monday. Attacking Lucas and President Truman as among "the most reactionary men I have ever known" Cain accused the leadership of attempting to speed the bill through the Senate in an effort to influence House passage.

Blames Election Fight

He said the bill was put ahead in the Senate for "promiscuous, political and untenable" reasons and was part of Lucas' Illinois fight for reelections. Lucas colleague, Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), "begged" the Senate Banking Committee to report it out because Gov. Adlai Stevenson failed to get a State law extended by the Illinois' legislature, Cain told the Senate.

"What right has Chicago or the State of Ilinois to exercise pressure on Congress to do for them what their self-respect ought to demand that they do for themselves?" he said.

Saying there is no national emergency justifying an extension, he charged the Administration is "trying to rush a quickie" at the expense of landlords and taxpayers of States and communities which have been decontrolled.

At times he munched chocolate or sipped coffee during his 3-hour speech. A year ago he conducted a 6-hour filibuster against President Truman's ill-fated appointment of Mon C. Walgren to the National Security Resources Board. At that time he placed an extra pair of shoes under his desk.

Seeking passage of the bill by Friday, Lucas said he does not expect the House to take up the bill in any event until the Senate has passed it. Cain merely repeated his threat to speak "as long as I can stand." He appealed to Senators who voted against a compromise deficiency appropriation for rent controls last spring to join him.

"Talking at length against any proposal is hard work," he said. "Help in doing this will be greatly appreciated."

12-Mile Limit Set by Russia as Control Factor

Stockholm, June 7 (U.P.).—Russia has announced officially that she claims control over waters within 12 nautical miles of her coasts, it was disclosed today.

Informed sources said Sweden and Denmark would ask Russia to meet and discuss her claim to the larger sea area. If she refuses, they make take the matter to the United Nations, the sources said.

Russia stated her claim in a note to the Swedish government rejecting a protest against the seizure of a Swedish fishing craft in the open Baltic. About 20 Scandinavian vessels have been seized by the Red navy in the last three months.

Thieves Take $4200 From Quonset Inn

Thieves looted the Quonset Inn, 3225 Naylor rd., Silver Hill, Md., of $4200 in cash and 16 fifths of whiskey, Prince Georges County police reported yesterday.

A side door was jimmied open and about $4000 removed from a safe in the restaurant office according to police. About $200 was rifled from five coin machines, Detective Vincent Free said. The theft occurred early Monday.

A-Weapon Speed Up Urged by McMahon

Philadelphia, June 7 (U.P.).—Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) said tonight that the United States has not spent enough money on atomic weapons "to be on the safe side" in the cold war.

McMahon, chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, told the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia that the United States should step up its atomic program. He did not specify any specific amount of money.

"Less than one-fortieth of our total military spending since the recent war has been devoted to this purpose and less than 1 percent of our total national budgets," he said. "To be on the safe side, the scale of our atomic program should be increased."

McMahon's committee heard a plea Tuesday from Atomic Energy Commissioner Gordon Dean for help in staving off House-approved cuts in its appropriation. Dean said the cuts might jeopardize the Nation's lead in weapons research and production.

Will Urge Restoration

McMahon and Senators William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) agreed to go before the Senate Appropriations Committee and urge restoration of the funds.

McMahon said tonight the United States has placed far too much dependence upon "narrow military terms" and Marshall Plan aid in combating Communist aggression. He said it has not placed sufficient emphasis upon "spiritual" weapons.

"Do not misunderstand me," he adde. "I am keenly aware that empty stomachs must be filled if minds are not to become victimized by evil philosophies. I am keenly aware that troops armed with pitchforks and broomsticks, however righteous the principles for which they fight, cannot halt an opponent armed with modern tools of war.

Concerned About Adequacy

"As a matter of fact, I am so well aware of the tribute that must be paid to Caesar that I am concerned about the adequacy of our effort in the field of atomic weapons."

McMahon said the "Soviet Iron Curtain" — and not the atomic bomb — represents the greatest threat to mankind today. He said the fear of universally destructive war could be dissipated if the average Russian could have a true picture of America.

"Such a Russian, if ordered to help prepare an atomic offensive against the West, could not put his heart into the work," he said. "Knowing that America seeks peace and friendship, he would wonder why atomic energy is not being regulated through the United Nations."

McMahon is the leader of a number of Senators and Representatives who have sponsored a resolution calling for a United Nations disarmament meeting. The resolution would pledge the United States to use the money ordinarily spent upon arms for peaceful purposes once disarmament had been achieved.

Senate Okays Bill to Extend DP Plan a Year

Senate approval sent to the White House yesterday a bill increasing to 341,000 the number of displaced persons eligible to come to this country to make their homes.

The legislation extends for a year beyond June 30 a 1948 law which provided for the admission of 205,000 displaced persons.. Around 153,000 have entered so far.

Final congressional action came with Senate approval by voice vote of a compromise measure worked out by Senate and House conferees. The House approved the bill Tuesday.

Besides providing for the admission of 341,000 DPs, the measure also would permit the entry of 5000 adopted children, 54,744 persons of German origin who were driven out of their homes in eastern Europe after the war, and up to 15,000 refugees already in this country on temporary visas.

D. C. Suffrage Group to Elect

The Central Suffrage Conference will hold its annual election meeting at 8 p. m. tonight in the board room of the District Building.

Besides electing officers for the coming year, the meeting will review progress and formulate plans for "pushing the suffrage campaign to a successful conclusion," Conference President, Culver B. Chamberlain said last night.

The group's nominating committee will present a slate of two candidates for each office.

They are: Chamberlain and Harry N. Stull, president; Edmund E. Pendleton, jr., and Mrs. Irvine L. Lenroot, first vice president; Kate Alfriend and Sturfiis Warner, second vice president; Woolsey W. Hall and Col. Campbell C. Johnson, third vice president; Gerhard van Arkal L. Fickling and Arthur Clarendon Smith, treasurer, and Mrs. George W. Hodgkins, historian.

Weyland Heads Tactical Air

The Air Force yesterday gave its Tactical Air Command a new chief to let the present TAC commander devote his full time to forthcoming atomic weapon tests in the Pacific.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, it was said, will be relieved by Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland July 3, as Tactical Air Commander at Langley AF Base, Virginia, and take up headquarters at the Air Proving Ground, Elgin, Fla.

Lee has had charge of planning for the air phases of a new series of atomic tests at Eniwetok Atol since February, along with his TAC job. Now he will devote full time to the atomic tests, which probably will not be held until next year.

Weyland has been deputy commandant of the National War College here. He'll be replaced by Maj. Gen. John M. Weikert. Other shifts:

Maj. Gen. Frederic H. Smith from the ePntagon to be Eastern Air Defense Commander, Mitchel Air Force Base, N. Y

Maj. Gen. Alden R. Crawford, now commander of the Twelfth Air Force which is being abolished, to be commander for materiel, United States Air Forces in Europe. Brig. Gen. Max F. Schneider, now holding that post, will return to the States for reassignment.

Acheson Chills Lie's Peace Parley Plan

States has always tried to reach agreement in these areas, Acheson said, and "has always been ready to negotiate with other members of the United Nations on any matter in the appropriate forum." Finally he dealt with Lie's efforts to settle the question of Chinese representation, the pretext for the recent walkouts from U. N. bodies. This deadlock did not arise from the American position, Acheson said, but from the Russians' refusal to accept majority decisions in U. N. organs.

"Their refusal constitutes a boycott of the United Nations and an unwarranted attempt at coercion," Acheson declared. "We do not like coercion.

"We will accept the decision of any organ of the United Nations made by the necessary majority and we will not walk out. "We do not think the veto applies in the Security Council and, as I have frequently stated, we believe that each nation must decide for itself how it is going to vote on the question, and we are not going to try to influence them."

Having restated this American position on the Chinese issue, Acheson said the United States still wanted the Soviet Union "associated in every aspect of the United Nations," despite the Soviet record of "obstruction in many respects" before the walkout.

"We desire indeed that the Soviet Union should participate in the specialized agencies in which it has never so far participated," he said, "and whole-heartedly to join with other members in genuine efforts to solve the difficulties which are before the United Nations."

China's U.N. Delegate Attacks Lie's Plan

Lake Success, June 7 (AP).—Nationalist China's chief U. N. delegate said today Trygve Lie's 20-year program for peace through the U. N. would spread communism throughout Asia without solving East-West problems.

This reaction from the delegate, T. F. Tsiang, came after the U. N. Secretary-General carried his 10-point program to all members of the U. N. for support.

Here, in brief, are his 10 points:

1. Twice-a-year Security Council meetings, secret if necessary, attended by heads of governments.
2. New effort for atomic energy control agreement to prevent war use and promote use for peace.
3. New attempt to control other weapons of mass destruction and conventional armaments.
4. New attempt to provide the Security Council with its own armed forces.
5. Let every nation enter the U. N., including Germany and Japan when they sign peace treaties.
6. Technical assistance program for economic development to expand during at least the next 20 years.
7. Greater use of the 13 U. N. specialized agencies, like the World Health Organization, Russia belongs to only two.
8. Widen respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms.
9. Advance colonial and semi-colonial peoples toward equality.
10. Use U. N. charter powers to speed up world law for a one-world society.

East Germans Accept Poles' Border Claim

Berlin, June 7 (NYHT).—East Germany, presenting itself as an ostensibly sovereign state, concluded peace with Poland today without a formal peace treaty.

That is the significance being given the seven agreements with the Communist government of East Germany concluded with the Communist government of Poland.

The most important agreement formally fixed the Oder-Neisse Rivers as the permanent German-Polish frontier.

[Acceptance of the Oder-Neisse line would give Poland the nearly 30,000 square miles of German territory she annexed after World War II.—Editor's Note.]

The agreement brought an outburst of protests from Western Allied authorities and from west Germans. John J. McCloy, United States high commissioner for Germany, said the United States could not recognize any agreement concluded by a government which is not recognized by the German people. He also made the point which was voiced in Washington, London and Paris—that the Warsaw agreement violates the Potsdam decision to leave the formal fixing of a German-Polish frontier to a peace conference.

To give still more of an air of independence to the East German regime, the Russians announced today they would cut the personnel of their control commission in Germany by at least 20 percent within the next two or three months.

Most of the Warsaw agreements, which cover economic, scientific and cultural relations between East Germany and Poland, are similar to those which have been concluded by the different satellite states with each other and with the Soviet Union. The only important difference is the absence of an agreement on mutual military assistance.

The seven agreements provide:

1. Ratification of the Oder-Neisse boundary.
2. Sixty percent increase in trade.
3. Undisclosed amount of credit granted by Poland to East Germany.
4. Scientific and technical cooperation.
5. Exchange of information on the German five-year plan and the Polish six-year plan.
6. Further expansion of trade by a long-term trade agreement to be negotiated in September.
7. Scientific, literary and cultural exchange.

U. S. Must Arm Europe, Marshall Says

controlled Eastern Germany which appears to be a regular army. The United States, Russia and all the wartime allies agreed to demilitarize Germany.

Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee asked Marshall during the hearing if he felt rearming western Europe might bring on war rather than deter it. Marshall conceded that there was a hazard of this, but that the balance of risk lay all the other way.

"To sit idle and impotent would be fatal for several reasons," he declared. "First it would destroy the morale of the countries of western Europe and second it would play into Soviet hands."

Reds Would Start Pressure

Russia merely would start putting pressure on them and force them into the Communist camp, he added.

Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. Y.) wanted to know if Marshall saw any prospect of reconciliation between the East and West. The General replied that because the Soviet high command includes a "most-realistic collection of operators," the chances of reconciliation will be increased by a strong stand by the United States.

How stable does he feel is the USSR regime today, Marshall was asked. While we know little about the "general temper" of the mass of people behind the Iron Curtain, it is possible to judge some of the problems faced by the chiefs of a police state like Russia, he replied.

Sees Reds' Troubles Growing

"They have their troubles which I think will grow with time and I hope a short time," Marshall said, adding that when a dictatorship "starts to topple it comes down with a crash." There's no evidence of anything like this now, however, he noted.

The former Secretary of State repeatedly emphasized that the important thing is to rebuild the morale and confidence of western Europe. We can help them only to build "reasonable" security," he said.

Judd and others of the "Asia bloc" tackled Marshall on the China question, contending that a stronger American course of action just after the war could have saved the Nationalist government.

Marshall replied that the only thing that would have helped would have been for the United States to "move in" and take control of China—an undertaking that would have weakened us tremendously, he said.

State Department chiefs lacked toughness toward communism, Judd insisted. The General replied that he overlooked the reaction of the American people.

American leaders would have "come in for wholesale condemnation" if they had not "exerted every effort to find some basis for a peaceful settlement with the USSR" rather than a military adjustment, said Marshall. Only after they "met complete frustration" was the present western Europe assistance program launched, he declared.

O'Conor Charges Lie Follows Stalin's Line

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) said yesterday Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, "is definitely following the Communist Party line."

O'Conor sharply criticized Lie's new demand for settling the issue of Chinese representation in the U. N.

"His recommendation is all in the interest of the Kremlin," O'Conor said in a statement just before leaving here for New York to head the U. S. delegation at the International Labor Conference in Geneva, Switzerland.

O'Conor said that Lie, while calling for a special session of the U. N. Security Council, "had previously announced that the Soviet Union would not participate unless a representative of Communist China would attend."

"Lie is merely mouthing Stalin's position which, to put it tritely, is merely saying 'let's all get together—and do as I say'," O'Conor said.

Ten Arrested In Northeast Gaming Raid

Vice squad detectives yesterday afternoon arrested 10 persons, charging two with gaming and eight with disorderly conduct, in a raid on a restaurant at 1242 6th st. ne.

Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad chief, said $557 in cash, $21 in checks, a quantity of numbers slips, a radio and a racing forum were seized.

When raiders told the owner of the establishment, Tom S. Pappas, 58, of 3223 Eads st. ne. that they had observed "gambling going on," Pappas replied, according to Blick: "That what I pay $300 a month rent for."

Pappas was charged with setting up a gaming table and permitting gaming. He was released under $2500 bond for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Melville W. Childs, 50, of 4601 Lewis ave. se., said by Blick to be the manager of the establishment, was charged with operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips, permitting gaming and setting up a gaming table. He was released under $4000 bond for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Eight others were arrested while sitting at tables laden with racing forms, but no food, Blick said. They were taken to the Ninth Precinct station house, where each forfeited $5 collateral on disorderly conduct charges.

Judge Stops Trial, Frees Ex-Bank Teller

Samuel A. Palmer, jr., former note teller at the Burke and Herbert Bank in Alexandria, was acquitted in the United States Court at Alexandria yesterday on a four-count embezzlement indictment.

Judge Albert V. Bryan threw out the indictment on the grounds the Government case had failed to prove misappropriation of funds.

Judge Bryan said the Government had produced "nothing greater than a strong suspicion of embezzlement."

Palmer, 24-year-old former University of Virginia student, was accused of taking $202.78 from the bank in October, 1948. An FBI agent previously had testified he found shortages in that sum in ledgers "normally handled by Palmer."

Palmer said he could not account for the shortages, and said he frequently was replaced by other employes when he went out to lunch or was sent out on "bank errands."

Senate Confirms Doty

The Senate yesterday approved the nomination of Dale E. Doty of California as Assistant Secretary of the Interior. Action was by voice vote.

Arms News Hailed by French

en Congress by Secretary of State Acheson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, certainly will correct that sense of despondency if allowed to become United States policy. It is the first time Europeans have got the impression that they may be equipped to defend themselves.

There is a tendency in France to regard the Atlantic too broad to save Europe fro mterrible punishment, even though United States might and efficiency are determine dto cross it and strike the decisive blow against any continental aggressor.

But with the most modern arms in European hands, the situation could change overnight and army morale would strike the fever heat of 1914, military circles said.

Their own enthusiasm was an indication of what they meant.

Britain Seen Leaning To Schuman Plan

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Marshall Plan's roving Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman, yesterday ventured his "personal opinion" that at some alter date Great Britain would be found participating in the Schuman plan for pooling European coal and steel operations.

Britain's present aloofness from the program, Harriman said, is doubtless because it first wants to know more about what France has in mind in carrying out the bold plan.

At one point Harriman said he expected ultimately to see Britain "negotiating" with the other steel-making nations of Europe on the plan. Later, he used the word "participating," but made clear that that might be something distinct from actually joining the proposed consortium.

Harriman, back in the United States on a trip from his Paris headquarters, made his comments in a press conference.

Opposite of Cartel

The Schuman plan, he told reporters, is the "most dramatic example" of a recent and pronounced "rebirth of initiative" in Europe. Its political significance, he added, was "tremendous," with the aim of bringing about a "fundamental understanding between Germany and France."

Harriman vigorously denied that the plan contemplated the creation of a giant European steel cartel. As French Foreign Minister Schuman proposed it, Harriman explained, it was the exact opposite.

Rather than envisaging the creation of a protective umbrella over high prices, restriction of production and division of markets—the hallmarks of cartels—the French proposed to increase productivity, eliminate inefficient production facilities, free trade, remove restrictions and equalize access of consumers to materials and finished products, Harriman declared.

In response to a question, Harriman said no request had been received from the European nations for Marshall Plan funds to aid the coal and steel pooling proposal. But if such a request were made, he went on, it would receive "sympathetic consideration." There are no inhibitions against the use of Economic Cooperation Administration funds for such purpose, he said.

ECA Fund Use Rejected

Earlier in the day, Secretary of State Acheson firmly rejected the idea, however, of using ECA money to force the achievement of the Schuman plan.

At his weekly news conference, he was asked about congressional suggestions that ECA aid be withheld from Britain until it should join in the Schuman proposal.

Acheson made clear he could not agree with such an idea. He took occasion to restate one of his favorite theses: it is most important to keep programs directed at their primary purposes and not to try to make them accomplish something for which they were not designed.

It would be most unwise, Acheson said, to use European Recovery Program or Military Assistance Program funds as levers to accomplish other aims. Those programs, he explained, are in our own interest as well as in those of the participating nations abroad.

Harriman denied the validity of recent press reports that a spirit of "neutralism," or a desire to withdraw from the Atlantic community had pervaded western Europe.

He conceded that some newspapers, such as Le Monde, in Paris, had been writing articles to that effect. Nevertheless, he said, "I see no change in the basic public opinion in favor of strengthening the North Atlantic Pact relationship." That has been, and still is, the "underlying position" of the Europeans, he said.

Ban on 17 More

MacArthur Extends Jap Red Purge

Tokyo, June 7 (AP).—General MacArthur slugged Japan's Communists toward a showdown tonight, ordering yesterday's purge of all 24 Politburo members extended to 17 key men of the party newspaper.

Akahata (Red Flag) struck back with a call for a general strike and this blazing headline: "The Communist Party Together With the People Is Indestructible."

Should a general strike—and violence—develop, it might open the way for a decisive showing of Red cards in Japan.

The Allied Occupation Commander lowered the boom on Akahata's policy makers the same way he did on the members of the party's Central Committee yesterday. He told the Japanese government to ban them from public life.

After receiving MacArthur's order, Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida conferred with the general for an hour and there was speculation that new moves against the Reds might be coming. The government has said it would outlaw the Communist Party.

The Communists already have lost eight seats in the Diet (Parliament) in MacArthur's crackdown. Seven of the 24 Politburo members named yesterday held seats. So did one of the Akahata group listed today. The Reds still have 33 of the Assembly's 716 seats.

The new order apparently caught party chieftains flatfooted. They had just announced an eight-man "leading group" to replace the Central Committeemen purged yesterday. One of the eight was knocked out by the Akahata list.

MacArthur's letter to Yoshida called the Communist paper a "glaring exception" to the responsibility of the Japanese press in general.

Japanese police with search warrants raided headquarters of a Tokyo union today. They said they were searching for documentary evidence connected with a letter denouncing MacArthur's occupation. The letter was read to a union meeting Saturday.

Duvieusart Asked to Form New Cabinet

Brussels, June 7 (AP).—Regent Prince Charles named Jean Duvieusart, a newcomer in Belgian politics, to form a government today. The return of King Leopold to his throne after 10 years appeared likely in a matter of weeks.

The premier-designate told a news conference he hoped to complete an all-Social Christian cabinet Thursday and its first move would be to convene Parliament to repeal the act creating a regency.

The Social Christians won a majorjty of two in the House of Representatives in general parliamentary elections Sunday over the anti-Leopold Socialists, Liberals and Communists.

Duvieusart said his cabinet would put no conditions on the return of the king. This was in answer to a question whether the king might come back under his offer of April 15 to turn his powers over temporarily to his son, 19 year-old Prince Baudouin.

Parliament cannot act before June 21, however. It does not meet until June 20, and must first give the new government a vote of confidence.

The 50-year-old premier-designate first became a member of Parliament after the liberation in September, 1944. He became Minister of Economics in 1947 and has held the post ever since.

Now Science Delves Into Firefly's Glow

Oak Ridge, Tenn., June 7 (AP).—Science wants to know what makes a firefly glow.

Dr. Bernard L. Strehler, a Johns Hopkins University scientist, ordered 100,000 fireflies today to try to find out.

He told Oak Ridge youngsters he would pay 25 cents a hundred for all the live lighting bugs they bring in. Scientists know a substance called luciferin causes the fireflies to glow, but they don't know how the bugs make the stuff.

Albania, Britain and Greece Reported in Secret Talks

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 7 (U.P.).—An authoritative source said today that British, Greek and Albanian officials are conferring secretly in Rome in hopes of bringing Albania into the Western orbit.

The conferences were said to have caused serious concern in Yugoslav official circles, and to have surprised the few American officials who know what is going on.

Independent sources here confirmed the report, although the source predicted it would be denied by the three governments concerned.

The informant, who recently returned from Italy, said three high-ranking Albanian officials arrived in Rome May 1 and immediately conferred with British emissaries from London.

The Albanians—Deputy Foreign Minister Mihail Prifti, Trade Minister Kire Gena and Police Col. Isuf Kamaba—ostensibly went to Rome to negotiate a trade agreement with Italy, the source said.

In fact, however, they immediately began conversations with Greek and British intelligence officers, he added.

The British group was said to be headed by Maj. Fitzroy MacLean, an intelligence expert who worked with the Yugoslav and Albanian undergrounds during the war.

Albania has been virtually isolated from Russia since Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito was "excommunicated," and some British officials believe the tiny Adriatic nation can be won for the West.

Yugoslavia would like to win Albania away from Russia, but does not like the idea of its neighbor joining forces with the "imperialist" West.

Aldrich Sees Franco

Madrid, June 7 (U.P.)—Winthrop Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank of New York, discussed Spain's economic and financial position today with Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Jaycees Indorse Single Fund Drive

Directors of the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday indorsed a proposed single fund drive by the Community Chest.

They also voted approval of suggested payroll deduction for contributions by Federal employes.

Paul Matthews, Jaycee president, stated that "only by a single Community Chest fund-raising effort and reevaluation of services rendered by institutions now members of the United Community Services can this community successfully carry on its moral and social obligations."

Truman Off Today to Missouri

President Truman yesterday called off his Thursday news conference to work on two foreign policy speeches he will make in Missouri this weekend.

Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters the cancellation will give Mr. Truman time to complete the addresses and clear his desk of a batch of work.

The President will fly to St. Louis today on the presidential plane Independence. He will leave at 5 p. m.

He will go by train from St. Louis Friday to speak at graduation exercises at the University of Missouri at 12:15 p. m. He will be presented an honorary degree of doctor of laws as well as a Phi Beta Kappa key.

His other foreign policy speech will be made Saturday at 4 p. m. at the dedication of Jefferson Park in St. Louis.

The Jefferson Park speech will be one of a series Mr. Truman likely will make during ceremonies in connection with the annual reunion of the 35th Division. The reunion speeches will be "off the cuff."

Mr. Truman also will make a rear-platform speech from a Wabash special train en route from Columbia to St. Louis Friday afternoon.

Court Asked By German To Find Kin

An aged woman in Germany is seeking the descendants of her uncle, Julius Ende, who came to this country in 1852 and operated a print shop here.

District Court received a letter from Rhineland, Germany, from a Pastor Fritz Koller, telling of the request of the woman, Helen Ende, born at Friedeberg, Silesia in 1885.

The letter said that Ende's last known address was ..Corner 8th and E sts., Washington, D. C., and Care of J. F. Neidfeldt, 420 E st., Washington, D. C.

Court officials said that they were powerless to aid Mrs. Ende, and suggested to reporters that publicity might bring the relatives, if any exist, into contact with her.

Ho Reported Ousted As Viet Minh Leader

Saigon, Indo-China, June 7 (U.P.) Unconfirmed reports circulated here today that a Moscow-ordered shakeup in the rebel Viet Minh movement had ousted veteran leader Ho Chi-minh in favor of a more orthodox Communist.

The reports said Dang Xuan Khu, 42, secretary of the Indo-Chinese Communist Politburo, took over active direction from the 58-year-old Moscow-trained Ho.

A crisis within the Viet Minh has been rumored for some time.

TO VETERAN GROUPS ONLY

Notice is hereby given that the Public Housing Commissioner will, until

5 P.M. Monday, August 7, 1950

situated in Prince George's County, Maryland, which consists of certain property within an area bounded on the west by Edmonston Road, on the south by Southway from Edmonston Road to Glendale Road and along Glendale Road to the Washington-Baltimore Express Highway, on the east by the Washington-Baltimore Express Highway and on the north by the northern limit of Greenbelt, to permit the negotiation of a sale of said property at the fixed price of $8,522,350 to a organized on a non-profit basis, as provided in Public Law 65, 81st Congress, approved May 19, 1949. Any group considering itself entitled to a preference as provided in said law and desiring to purchase such property should apply to the Public Housing Administration on or before said date and furnish with its application to purchase, a complete statement on the basis of which preference is claimed, and a detailed plan of the proposed method of financing, development and operation of the properties.

Such information must include:

The organizational structure of the group.

The identity of its membership.

The rights and obligations of membership therein, and provisions assuring present tenants of an equal opportunity to become members.

The amount, kinds, and preference, if any, of stock, funds or securities proposed to be issued. The manner of marketing the same, the limitation as to the holding thereof.

The compensation, if any, to be paid, and the persons to whom payment is to be made for organizing, negotiating and financing purposes, and the basis upon which such compensation is computed.

In demonstrating to the Commissioner its responsibility, the prospective purchaser group, at the end of the offering period, must have a membership of sufficient size so that at least 800 of the units in the project can be occupied by members; the membership shall consist of veterans as defined in Public Law 65 and may include non-veteran occupants but must include not less than 400 veterans.

The group must furnish evidence that at least the required number of its members will be able and willing to make a down payment of 10 per cent of the purchase price of the unit he occupies, or intends to occupy.

Should an application be received which, in the opinion of the Public Housing Commissioner, is from a group entitled to preference under the Act, and should the group demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that it has sufficient financial resources so as to indicate a probable ability to consummate the purchase of the property, the Commissioner will enter into negotiations with such group for the purchase of the property. In the event more than one group is, in the opinion of the Commissioner, qualified as above stated, sealed bids from such qualified preference groups will be required and the award will be made on the basis of the highest acceptable monetary return to the Government, in accordance with the requirements of the statute.

Negotiations will not be had with or bids accepted from any group which has not applied for the property and qualified as to preference rights and financial responsibility as above provided for on or before August 7, 1950.

The terms of sale for the property shall be not less than 10 per cent down payment, the balance on mortgage at not less than 4 per cent interest for a term of not more than 25 years.

The Commissioner reserves the right to withdraw from the negotiated sale any part of the property during negotiations. The Commissioner reserves the right to terminate negotiations if and when he believes further negotiations will be fruitless.

The offering excludes the electrical distribution system and certain other property which has been or will be sold or dedicated.

The property is offered "where is, as is" and will be sold subject to certain leases on the commercial and residential property. The Government will tender leases to all eligible tenants of the residential property prior to title passage, which leases will be for a period of 12 months.

Detailed information concerning this sales offering may be obtained from, and all notices and applications to purchase the property should be addressed to

Tidelands Bill Due To Pass House Again

The House is expected shortly to thumb its nose at the Supreme Court by once again passing a bill to give the oil-rich tidelands to the States.

But chances are that's as far as the measure will go in this Congress.

The House Rules Committee has scheduled a meeting Tuesday to consider the bill, already approved by the Judiciary Committee. It is essentially the same as a bill passed by the Democratic-controlled 79th Congress and vetoed by President Truman. In the Republican-controlled 80th the House again passed the bill but it did not come to a Senate vote, largely because its sponsors figured that "incoming President Dewey" would sign such a measure if they waited a year.

Senate Action Doubted

Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Senate Interior Affairs Committee said yesterday he doubted any legislative action would be taken by the Senate this year. He favors the bill to let the Federal Government run the tidelands, but paying a large portion of the income to the States.

O'Mahoney also suggested that all the revenue—and it would run into hundreds of millions of dollars—coming to the Federal Government under such a plan be pledged toward retiring the national debt.

At present the Interior Department is unable to manage the California tidelands because Congress won't pass any legislation on that subject. The same situation will exist as to Texas and Louisiana. The Supreme Court on Monday ruled that the Government, not the States, has paramount interests in the off-shore areas, as it earlier had ruled in California's case.

Rehearing Plea Expected

The two States are expected to ask a rehearing, thus keeping the cases in formal litigation until next winter since the court has now recessed until October. Sometime before September 15 the Justice Department will submit a decree for court approval designed to carry out the latest rulings. That will be quite a job, Justice officials agree, without congressional help.

One view at the Capitol yesterday was that the matter will drag along until after another presidential election in the hopes that a new President might be more disposed to sign away what the court has said is Federal property. There have been reports that Mr. Truman may be changing his mind on tidelands legislation but there has been no evidence to back up any such statement.

President Speaks at Lutheran Synod have come from Moses at Sinai and Jesus on the Mount."

Though the United States is endeavoring to live and act by that law, "we have moral forces in the world which do not believe in a moral code, that even go so far as to say that there is no Supreme Being, that material things are all that count," the President said.

"Material things are ashes if there is no spiritual background for the support of those material things."

He expressed the hope that "in the end" we may have a world founded on the same principles as is the Government of the United States.

Church Unity Action

Earlier, the Lutherans approved of four measures leading to church unity.

They approved in principle complete organic union of the eight participating bodies in the National Lutheran Council and called for transformation of the council from a common agency into a federation.

The Augustana church is the first to act upon the proposal, which will come before all eight Lutheran groups in the next five months. The convention also authorized formation of a Lutheran unity committee to discuss merger proposals.

The convention also agreed to join the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America when that interdenominational Protestant agency is formed this fall.

In his annual message on the state of the church, Dr. P. O. Bersell, president, appealed to all governments of the world to launch "a gigantic new all-out offensive for peace."

D. C. Dairies Delay Reply To Drivers

Greater Washington's dairies yesterday put off until Friday their decision whether to accept a union demand for arbitration of working hours or face a strike Sunday.

Local 246 of the AFL Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Union overwhelmingly rejected a management proposal to reduce their working hours by one day a month, and asked arbitration of the union demand for a 40-hour work week instead of the present 48-hour week.

The contract between the union and nine major dairies expired yesterday. The local extended the contract for four days, to 12.01 a. m. Sunday.

Representatives of the dairies and union met yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel in a mediation session with Henry Baker, Conciliation Commissioner. Dairy negotiators asked a one-day recess to consider the union's ultimatum.

The union has ordered another rank-and-file meeting for Friday night at Turner's Arena to act on the "final offer" by the dairies.

Dworshak Seeks Election

Senator Dworshak (R., Idaho) yesterday announced his candidacy for election to the seat he now occupies by appointment. Dworshak was named last winter to succeed the late Bert H. Miller (D.), who defeated him in 1948.

2 Men Seek Town Hall Seat In Arlington

Only two candidates have filed for the non-partisan Town Meeting nomination for a seat on the Arlington County Board, to be filled this November. The filing deadline was Tuesday night.

Incumbent board chairman Daniel Dugan and George J. Freisem will seek the title of Town Meeting candidate at a nominating convention at 8 p. m. Monday.

The Town Meeting, open to Arlington residents who have paid their poll taxes and who indorse the non-partisan election system, will be held in the Thomas Jefferson School, 816 S. Fillmore st., Arlington.

Dugan, 34, of 1021 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, is a Civil Service Commission employe. Freisem, 40, lives at 909 N. Larrimore st., Arlington, and works for the General Accounting Office.

Only Democrat to file for the county board seat was Fred W. Bach, 40, of 1141 N. Utah st., Arlington. No Republican candidates have filed.

11 Lose Pleas In Congress Contempt Case

Eleven members of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee were jailed for contempt of Congress yesterday, still protesting their innocence and denouncing American aid to Spain.

Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech turned down motions to suspend or lighten sentences imposed on the 11 for refusing to produce records of their organization for the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1946. The Refugee Committee was branded subversive by the Justice Department.

Committee Chairman Edward K. Barsky was sentenced to six months and fined $500. The others, including Novelist Howard Fast, were sentenced to three months and fined $500. They were members of the committee's executive board.

They were taken in a prisoner's van to the District of Columbia jail where they will remain until James V. Bennett, head of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, decides where they will serve their sentences. His decision probably will come next week.

Judge Keech turned down a request by Defense Attorney O. John Rogge to delay execution of the sentences until the District Appeals Court disposes of another case involving two other committee members.

He also refused to cancel sentences of three women defendants, all of them mothers.

"They were mothers when the original sentence was imposed," he told Rogge. "At that time, I gave them an opportunity to purge themselves of contempt. It is now too late to take advantage of it."

Before appearing in court, Barsky and the others made public an open letter to President Truman opposing removal of the United Nations diplomatic ban on Spain. They said such action would be interpreted by the Spanish people as approval "of the Fascist Franco regime."

The letter was signed by 120 persons, including Representative Vito Marcantonio (A. L., N. Y.), Artist Rockwell Kent and Author Dashiell Hammett.

Atomic Guinea Pig Freed by Court: Beer Prescribed

Knoxville, Tenn., June 7 (U.P.). Dock Smith convinced a judge today that a daily ration of two beers was part of his routine as an "atomic guinea pig." He was freed of drunken driving charges.

His attorney produced a letter from the Isotopic Therapy Committee at the University of Tennessee explaining that he was under treatment for a blood condition.

His trouble causes dizzy spells and sometimes unconsciousness, he said, and doctors prescribed two beers a day to relieve it.

"They're using atomic guinea pig, judge," Smith explained.

yesterday the committee has arranged to hear Vardaman at a session behind closed doors Friday.

Holmes told newsmen today that the FBI had developed a "good case" in the Amerasia episode, but he said—without naming the individual—that someone in the Government put in a go-slow order on the prosecution.

President Truman countermanded the delay order, Holmes said, and called for vigorous action in the case.

Holmes was an assistant Secretary of State under the late Secretary Edward R. Stettinius, jr., at the time of the Amerasia arrests in June, 1945. He is now United States Minister to London.

The general refused to say who issued the go-slow order, but he told newsmen:

"It was not anyone in the State Department."

"Was it anyone in the White House?" a reporter asked.

"I would rather not say," he replied.

Holmes testified at a closed session of a Senate investigating committee.

The committee, headed by Chairman Tydings (D., Md.), has revived the Amerasia case as part of its inquiry into charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.).

McCarthy has contended the Amerasia case, involving the alleged illegal removal of hundreds of secret Government documents, is the key to his general charges of a Red network in the department.

The Senator and some of his Republican colleagues have claimed there was a "cover-up" of the Justice Deparment's failure to win prison-term convictions in prosecuting the case. Only two of the six persons arrested by the FBI paid fines; the others were cleared.

"The committee has sealed my lips," Holmes said after testifying.

However, he clarified two points.

Asked whether the delay order came from David K. Niles, a presidential aide, Holmes answered:

"So far as I know, it was not."

He also ruled out Alger Hiss as the source, repeating that it was not issued by anyone in the State Department.

Hiss, a former top-level State Department official, was convicted several months ago of lying when he swore he had never leaked State Department secrets to a Soviet spy ring courier.

At the time of the Amerasia arrests, Hiss was Secretary General of the United Nations Conference in San Francisco.

Last week Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), said it was "reasonable" to suspect that Hiss had tried to stall the prosecution of the Amerasia suspects.

The committee disclosed secret testimony by former Undersecretary of State Joseph C. Grew on May 20. It closely paralleled Holmes' version.

Grew recalled that he was acting Secretary of State at the time of the Amerasia arrests.

He said Holmes asked authority to bring about the arrest of those involved. Grew said that as he recalled it, Holmes told him he had consulted the State Department's legal adviser who said the FBI had a "good case."

Holmes confirmed to newsmen yesterday that in his opinion the FBI did have a good case.

Grew also touched on a contention by Senator McCarthy that he (Grew) was forced out of the State Department in the wake of the Amerasia case by "leftist pressure groups."

Grew told the committee:

"In this regard, I can say categorically that I was not forced to resign. For some time I had desired to retire. The war was over, I was past the retirement age, and I was facing the prospect of a major operation."

He said that when James F. Byrnes became Secretary of State, succeeding Stettinius, he renewed his request to retire "and Secretary Byrnes agreed."

In his comment to reporters, Holmes confirmed the testimony given by FBI Agent Myron Gurnea before a House Judiciary Subcommittee during its probe of the Amerasia case in 1946.

Gurnea told the House group: "On May 31, 1945 (a week before the Amerasia arrests), the Department of Justice advised the FBI that any prosecution in connection with this matter was to be held in abeyance until the conclusion of the San Francisco (U. N.) conference."

Gurnea said he understood that "some of the men connected with the San Francisco Conference" didn't want the Amerasia case prosecuted at that time because it might cause friction.

Holmes told reporters yesterday he went to President Truman when he got wind of the go-slow order, but he refused to say whether he told Mr. Truman who gave the order.

Tydings Action Assailed By Young Republicans

The Young Republican Club of Montgomery County met at the Bethesda County Building Monday and adopted a resolution condemning Senator Millard E. Tydings' "failure to carry out the spirit and intent of the Senate Resolution to investigate communism in the State Department."

NLRB Defends Power in Row With Denham

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The feud between the five-member National Labor Relations Board and its independent General Counsel over their respective powers yesterday moved one step forward to a decision in the courts.

The board filed a brief with the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals to back its contention that the board can, at its discretion, dismiss complaints of unfair labor practices which the General Counsel says ought to be prosecuted.

Drug Store Case

The particular case revolves around Haleston Drug Stores, which operate four retail outlets in Portland, Oreg. Outcome of the case will affect thousands of small business enterprises which the board asserts, in effect, are too small to influence the operation of the Taft-Hartley management labor relations act.

In the fall of 1948, the Halestone Drug Stores filed a petition with the board requesting an election among its employes to determine whether or not they wished to be represented in collective bargaining by the AFL Retail Clerks.

In the spring of 1949, the board held that the Halestone business, while affecting interstate commerce, was "essentially local in character." Therefore, the board decided, it would not "effectuate" the policies of the Taft-Hartley Act for the board to assert its jurisdiction in the case. The petition was dismissed.

Shortly after the board's decision, General Counsel Robert N. Denham—who has the sole authority to investigate and prosecute unfair labor practices—brought before the NLRB a complaint by Halestone against the AFL Culinary Workers' Alliance. A trial examiner threw out the case on the basis of the board's first Halestone decision.

Both Halestone Drug Co. and General Counsel Denham appealed the second case to the five-man board. The General Counsel argued that once he had decided to prosecute a case, the board had to consider it and make a determination. The board, however, rejected the General Counsel's stand, and tossed out the second Halestone case.

At this point, the Halestone Drug Co. appealed the NLRB's decision in the circuit court. The NLRB brief, filed yesterday, was in reply to the Halestone suit.

Theoretically, General Counsel Denham is not directly involved in this case, but Representative Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr. (N. Y., Dem.-Lib) has charged that the drug company went to the courts at the behest of General Consel Denham.

Because of the peculiar "two-headed" administrative setup of the NLRB, the General Counsel as a rule defends NLRB decisions which are contested in the courts. In this case, however, the General Counsel refused to handle the NLRB's defense because of the principle involved. The case is being defended by Ida Klaus, solicitor for the board.

Capital Transit Wins Award For Safety

The Capital Transit Company yesterday was awarded a silver plaque for the best 1949 safety record among transit companies serving urban populations of more than 600,000.

Presented by the American Transit Association in ceremonies at the Wardman Park Hotel, the award was the sixth received by Capital Transit within seven years for the top safety record in its class.

Capital Transit bus driver Preston Williams, 56, of 819 Aspen st., Takoma Park nw., received the award for the company from Julien H. Harvey, chariman of the association's award committee. Williams was selected because of his safety record—the past eight years without a chargeable accident. He has been a transit operator for 34 years. Last year, the D. C. Trucking Association honored Williams for his record.

Grand Jury Resumes Probe Of Bookmaking by Erickson

New York, June 7 (AP).—A Rackets-probing grand jury reconvened today to delve deeper into the bookmaking activities of Frank Erickson, admitted kingpin of one of the Nation's biggest gambling empires.

The New York County jury handed up a 60-count information against Erickson last week, accusing him of bookmaking and conspiracy. If convicted on each count, the gambler could be sent to prison for a maximum of 60 years.

Preparatory to today's session, nine more men were questioned yesterday by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan. The men were identified as betting clients of the gambler.

On Monday, the jury heard the testimony of a Newark, N. J., accountant who described himself as a tax consultant for the Colonial Inn at Hallandale, Fla. The district attorney's office called the inn a gambling casino in which Erickson and his associates held a financial interest.

The accountant, I. George Goldstein, was asked to bring with him all records he might have relating to operations of the inn. After signing a waiver of immunity, Goldstein testified before the jury for more than two hours.

At the conclusion of his testimony, he left the records with the District Attorney's office and was handed a subpoena to appear before the jury again next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Assistant District Attorney Vincent A. G. O'Connor was in Miami studying records of the Florida Crime Commission in a hunt for possible missing links in the Erickson investigation.

The District Attorney's office said O'Connor would concentrate particularly on Colonial Inn records.

Third Shelton Brother Slain From Ambush

Fairfield, Ill., June 7 (AP).—An assassin hiding in the bushes cut the fast-shrinking Shelton Brothers clean down to two members today.

Roy, 59, a quiet farmer who never was publicly identified with any of the Shelton gang's bloody wars, was the latest slaying victim.

He was cultivating a field on his farm 12 miles southeast of here about 8 a. m. when two bullets tore out of a patch of underbrush.

He toppled head first off his moving tractor, hit in the back and groin. A harrow and disk rig the tractor was pulling passed over him, mutilating his body. The killer escaped.

It was the third ambush attack on the Sheltons in 16 days and the eighth in less than three years.

Only two of the five brothers are left. They are "Big Earl," 54, twice the target of fumbling assassins in the last 13 months, and Dalta, 50, a farmer who steered clear of gangland activities.

Brother Carl, 69, was slain October 23, 1947, and Bernie, 50, on July 26, 1948.

Assassins tried twice in the last nine months to get Dalta's son, "Little Earl," 34. Little Earl was wounded in one of these attacks.

The Sheltons were a potent power in prohibition days.

Roosevelt and Warren Win Nominations for Governor

editorially supported both Roosevelt and Truman policies. Mrs. Douglas, although sometimes at odds with Mr. Truman, described herself as a "100 percent New Dealer."

The runoff will present a direct test of the Truman Fair Deal in California. Vigorous young Nixon—he's 37—strongly opposed the program as leading to State Socialism. He defended the House Un-American Activities program, of which he is a member. Mrs. Douglas, a congresswoman since 1944, opposed it.

The hottest contest for State office outside the governorship saw ouster of Republican Attorney General Frederick N. Howser. His administration has been in hot water—politically—since it went in four years ago. Warren upbraided Howser for showing no desire, he said, to clean up the State.

The Republican nomination went instead to a 45-year-old wartime soldier under General Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines. He is Edward S. Shattuck of Pasadena, who bears a striking pink-cheeked resemblance to Warren. The Democrats picked San Francisco's District Attorney, 44-year-old Edmund G. (Pat) Brown.

Miles Defeats Chavez In New Mexico Fight

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 7 (AP).—Representative John E. Miles with backing of one State administration today became the Democratic nominee for Governor.

And in doing so he turned back the attempt of Senator Dennis Chavez, a Truman political friend, and his brother, former United States Judge David Chavez, jr., to control the Democratic Party in New Mexico.

So. Dakota Contest May Require Canvass

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., June 7 (AP).—The South Dakota Republican primary may require an official canvass next week before it is decided whether it has a nominee for Governor.

With only 42 precincts missing, Attorney General Sigurd Anderson was within a fraction of the 35 percent necessary for nomination. He had 34.82 percent.

However, Joe Foss, Sioux Falls, World War flying ace, was confident the few remaining precincts would throw the contest into the state convention sometime in July.

ing news to bookies, according to Missouri's State's attorney, J. E. Taylor. He testified before the Senate Commerce unit that Pioneer distributed racing news by 19 phones to bookies in and near St. Louis and by Western Union wire to 28 Illinois points.

Taylor said without naming Continental that Pioneer's service came from a "national syndicate" which had "a monopoly on such business obtained by force, threats and intimidations which gives them control over all establishments using such service."

Western Union, after Molasky's stock interest was brought to light, stated that he exercised no control in the firm. It also noted that company rules forbid employes acting as agents for gamblers. It said "appropriate action" would be taken against any violators.

In St. Louis, Internal Revenue agents were taking a look at a file containing more than 200 names and headed "W. U. Agents." The cards gave names and address of agents who were paid 25 percent to work for the gambling syndicate.

The syndicate was formally known as C. J. Rich & Co., and its four heads yesterday posted bonds on an indictment obtained against them in Bridgeton, N. J. It was New Jersey's Governor Driscoll who tipped off Missouri's Governor Smith about the Western Union agents' activities after Western Union had been indicted at Bridgeton on a gambling charge growing out of bet acceptances by its office there.

The four syndicate operators are C. J. Rich, 46; Edward B. Fischer, 5[illegible]; Ralph M. Leon, 44, and Sidney Wyman, 40, a widely known gambler.

The raided syndicate files also yielded up the story of how an Oklahoma oil man went broke after losing $40,000 on horse race bets. According to the United Press, two letters were in the file. One told how "horses grow and grow on one" and that the loss of $40,000 had nearly bankrupted him. That was in August, 1948. He asked the syndicate "never to contact me again."

But only four months later the oilman wrote to ask the syndicate to hold up cashing a $3470 check because he had made "several wagers" on the strength of a pending sale of eight oil wells, the UP reported. The deal had been delayed, he said, and hence the oilman asked a delay until "this trouble cleared." Just what finally happened was not apparent from the letters.

Case Of Captain Richitt

Judging from the long-impounded report on charges made by Police Captain Richitt against Superintendent Barrett, those charges have not been substantiated. Captain Richitt had alleged at an extraordinary press conference in March that he had been transferred from his White House precinct because of information he had given the House District Subcommittee investigating crime—information indicating that Major Barrett was on friendly terms with gambler Emmitt Warring. The investigation conducted by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Maher not only vindicates Major Barrett and Inspector Jefferies, but also details five instances of misconduct by Captain Richitt himself. In view of the nature of the report, it is hard to see why the Commissioners delayed the release such a long time.

Major Barrett has played his cards wisely, in our opinion, by refraining from personally pushing trial board action against Richitt, although the Commissioners have left him free to do so. To avoid the appearance of a vendetta, it is better for police inspectors acting as a body to determine what will be done. At the same time, if Richitt's offenses are as serious as the report indicates, the matter should not be hushed up. The temptation, when high-ranking police officers are asked to pass judgment on their colleagues, is to avoid hurting feelings by keeping the affair in the family.

Police trial boards leave a good deal to be desired in this respect. Trial boards are perfectly proper instruments for dealing with mine-run infractions of police discipline. But when charges are of a serious nature, involving high-ranking officers, there ought to be some outside judicial finding. The Commissioners resorted to similar means in the special investigation of the allegations against Major Barrett, although that investigation did not have the benefit of judicial evidence. The procedure respecting high police officers ought to be regularized, possibly by bringing in courts of civilians in no way connected with the police administration.

Court On Trial

The controversy within the Juvenile Court has turned out to be a very serious matter. Miss Virginia Clary's letter of resignation as director of social work flatly accuses Judge Edith H. Cockrill of changing the court "from a court of chancery to a criminal court" and of negating the purposes for which it was established. According to Miss Clary, Judge Cockrill's attitude "creates a hostile atmosphere in the courtroom for children and adults alike." Many weeks of work with the individual child or adult is undone in the courtroom, she says, "in some instances completely shattered by the punitive manner in which the individual is treated." In general, Miss Clary's complaint is supported by Miss Clare Fagrie, chief supervisor of social work, who has also resigned.

To these grave charges are added complaints about "chaotic administrative methods" which are said to have "wrecked the high morale of the social service department." Judge Cockrill has denied these accusations and asserted that Miss Clary was asked to resign "on grounds of inefficiency and failure to assume the administrative responsibilities of her position." It is difficult to reconcile that statement with Miss Clary's detailed reply to the judge's original complaints. Nor can any weight be given to the judge's point that the charges against her have been made since she asked for Miss Clary's resignation. For some months it has been known that social workers in the court were disturbed over the manner in which some of the cases have been handled, and Miss Clary's intention to resign was known to the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee at least a month before the judge asked for her resignation.

The basic issue, of course, is the manner in which Judge Cockrill is conducting the court. She still insists that the basic controversy over the court's function was not the cause of the resignations. Now that Miss Clary has made public her letter, however, there seems to be no doubt about the matter. The only question left is what future course the court will take. The answer largely depends upon the judge herself. A danger signal has very definitely been posted over the court. Judge Cockrill's best answer would be to give the public full facts about the operation of the court in the past and to keep the public currently informed as to what the court is doing. Fortunately, she has already taken some steps in this direction.

A second step would be to invite the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee into her courtroom as observers of her work and to consult freely with the committee as to the best means of implementing the policy laid down in the Juvenile Court Act. The gist of the charge against her is that the court has been operating arbitrarily in accord with the dictates of a single will. The only satisfactory answer to such a a charge is a demonstration that the court can function as a community institution, with the aid of other agencies that are especially interested in the welfare of children.

Maritime Trouble

The new Federal Maritime Board, which was created to clean up the mess left by the subsidy excesses and irregularities of the old Maritime Commission, seems to be heading into the same sort of trouble. This danger may be seen in some of the appointments the new body has been making—men who have been associated with the very policies that have been damned by Congress and were a major factor leading to the reorganization.

Take, for example, the selection of Francis S. Walker as general counsel to the Maritime Board and the Maritime Administration. Mr. Walker comes from the law firm of Burns, Currie, Walker & Rich. John J. Burns, of the same firm, is general counsel to the American Merchant Marine Institute, the organization of the subsidized shipping operators. Mr. Walker, himself, has frequently represented the Merchant Marine Institute before committees of Congress as well as before the commission—facts not mentioned in the press release on his appointment. Without in any way reflecting on Mr. Walker's integrity, we suggest that the appointment of a man so closely identified with a private interest that will have business before the Maritime Board is highly improper.

Charles D. Marshall, general manager of the old Maritime Commission, was criticized by the House Executive Expenditures Committee, along with the commission chairman, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, for reshuffling personnel of doubtful qualifications. Yet Mr. Marshall was carried over as general manager of the new Maritime Administration, though reportedly he soon will resign. There are other similar appointments of staff members identified with discredited policies. It is also significant, in light of the fact that two of the three new temporary members of the Maritime Board have Navy backgrounds, that the appointment of several Navy men to key positions reportedly is imminent. The Navy was criticized in the first investigation by the House Executive Expenditures Committee for overzealousness in approving "national defense features" in new ship contracts. The Maritime Commission paid in full for such features, and according to the House committee, they were used as a subterfuge to grant higher subsidies.

This newspaper's concern with the Maritime Commission has not been with personalities as such, but with administration in the public interest of the law as written. That, and not devious ways of circumventing the law to favor the shipping industry, is the way to obtain a stable merchant marine. In light of requests from Congress and the President, assuredly the first job of the new board ought to be to review and revise past subsidy aberrations. We hope the members of the board are aware that, however good their intentions in this respect, their efforts can be sabotaged by staffs devoted to the old policies. To insure that the Maritime Board gets back into the channel will require more than ordinary perspicacity, plus guidance from the Secretary of Commerce.

Marginal Sea

It is now clear that the United States as a whole, rather than any of its constituent parts, has dominion over the marginal sea—the 3-mile belt lying seaward of inland waters and the low-tide mark around the Nation's coast. State possession of inland waters and of the tidelands—the submerged area landward of low-tide—remains as always undisputed. This decision of the Supreme Court on Monday followed as a matter of course from the California case, so far as Louisiana was concerned. In respect of Texas, a more difficult problem was presented, since that State, alone among the 48, was once an independent, sovereign republic and entered the Union by an agreement which provided, among other things, that Texas should "retain all the vacant and unappropriated lands lying within its limits."

But the agreement provided also that Texas should be admitted to the Union "on an equal footing with the existing States." This could no more mean a superior footing than it could mean an inferior one. If Texas were to retain dominion over the marginal sea off her coast, she would have an element of sovereignty possessed by no other State. The equal footing clause, said Mr. Justice Douglas for a bare majority of the court, "negatives any implied, special limitation of any of the paramount powers of the United States in favor of a State."

The effect of this close and admittedly delicate decision is to put under national control an asset of tremendous potential value to the national defense. Its effect is also to deprive the States of a potentially rich source of revenue. We think, however, that there is no occasion for representatives of the States concerned to retire to a wailing wall in the manner of Senator Connally. The revenue on which Texas has depended so largely to finance her public school system is derived in the main from wells drilled within the tideland and inland water areas and thus still subject to the State's plenary authority. And with respect to revenue which may be derived in the future from exploitation of the marginal sea, Congress can with good reason allot the coastal States a generous share.

But what Congress cannot do with any reason at all is to relinquish Federal management of the marginal sea. The quitclaim legislation adopted in the past and prevented from going into effect only by a presidential veto amounts, in the light of the Supreme Court's verdict, to nothing less than an attempt to give away a national heritage essential to the Nation's strength. Texas and Louisiana and California, as well as the rest of the country, will be best served by the conservation of this oil for the security of the Union. It is now high time for Congress to adopt legislation for the wise management of this precious asset by the Government of the United States.

Mr. Lie's Status

Mr. Acheson's statement on Mr Trygve Lie's visit to Moscow is a recognition of Mr. Lie's status which badly needed restatement. Mr. Lie is no mere international official. The Secretariat is a principal organ of the United Nations, but Mr. Lie has an organic role of his own as Secretary General. Under the Charter (Article 99) he is authorized to bring up any matter which he thinks is a danger to world peace. The pertinent article says that the organ of reference is the Security Council, but, this being in a state of deadlock, Mr. Lie decided to bring the deadlock personally to the attention of world capitals, with the hope of removing it. He had ample power to do this, let alone justification as a responsible voice of world opinion. Whether or not he forwarded the cause of resuscitating the Security Council is another question.

The statement of the Secretary of State meets head-on the issue which prevents a meeting of the Security Council, and that is the issue of Chinese representation. In so doing, however, he refines it. The real issue is the Soviet boycott, for the question could be settled one way or the other if the Soviet Union were to allow the Council to convene for that purpose. If the Soviet motion for the unseating of the Nationalist delegate were defeated, then Moscow would have a plausible reason for a walkout. As it is, its conduct looks at best sulky, at worst a piece of mingled tyranny and effrontery. To be sure, in parliamentary practice such matters are subject to preliminary feelers prior to a meeting. This is what this newspaper would recommend, for, if the deadlock keeps up, the Russians will have a near-monopoly of the inside track of the Peking government, though there is now in the Chinese capital the brilliant and astute Indian Ambassador, Mr. K. M. Panikkar. However, Secretary Acheson says brusquely, "We do not like coercion," and there the matter rests, with the outside world waiting, Micawber-like, for something to turn up that will break the deadlock.

In the meantime, Mr. Lie is to be commended on his initiative, and the opportunity might be taken of saying that he is the person who holds the United Nations together. It may seem somewhat inappropriate to call the huge Mr. Lie a thread, but that is his role in the world organization, anyway. If he were allowed to quit next February, when his five-year term expires, we doubt whether there is another man in the whole world upon whom the United States and the Soviet Union could agree as a successor. So low is the stock of one-world organization!

Ne Plus Ultra

Having decided to oust Mr. Remington without a trial, without so much as a hearing—in flat defiance of the loyalty procedures established by the President—it became necessary for Secretary Sawyer to invent charges which would serve as a gloss upon the action. What he, or his subordinates, have come up with as a ground for the ouster is the assertion that Mr. Remington has been obliged to take time off from his work in order to testify before courts and congressional committees!

Here is the final reductio ad absurdum of the whole merit system in the civil service. Any former Communist—or for that matter any Communist—can make a charge, no matter how extravagant, against an employe of the Commerce Department, and if the employe should be called up to Capitol Hill to answer the charge, off goes his head. Employes of the Commerce Department are now officially forbidden to defend themselves. A subpena from any congressional committee will serve in lieu of the traditional pink slip.

Mr. Sawyer has not only ignored the loyalty program; he is now in the process of trampling on its carcass, laughing out loud while doing so. There ought to be somebody in the Commerce Department to remind him that the presumption of innocence supposed to surround an American until he has been proved guilty was not intended to be a joke. There ought to be somebody to tell him that security of tenure in Federal jobs is not something to be breached by every agency chief who feels like sloughing off an embarrassing personnel problem. The charges Mr. Sawyer has trumped up against Mr. Remington are just about the ne plus ultra in legitimate asininity. Suppose they were applied to him personally the next time he goes up to the Hill to testify on anything?

And music and light.

Fairfax Schools

Agnes E. Meyer's article on Fairfax County in your issue of June 4 was the best yet. In this article she strikes at fundamentals in the organization and support of public education. As she said, Virginia is a classical example of how not to do it.

Virginia is one of the six States in which the Governor still appoints the chief State school officer. Its local school boards, as Mrs. Meyer pointed out, are probably farther from the people than those in any other State. State financial aid is tied up in the State political machine and local politicians dominate local financing of education. As she intimated, the psychology of subservience to political officers is the most damaging factor of all.

To illustrate the latter point, I know an eminent professor of education in a large university who still carries this psychology of subservience to political officers and contaminates others with it because of his service in the Virginia Teachers Association and as a school official in Virginia. Small concessions from politicians to the schools become major victories for education in the minds of the school people who must deal with partisan politicians rather than with the people themselves. They cannot seem to understand that they would do better if they were fully responsible directly to the people.

Complete fiscal independence and responsibility of local school boards everywhere, and an increased measure of such independence and responsibility in the State education agencies, are just about the most important needs education has. Some progress is being made. New York freed 56 of its city school boards a month ago by State law, and Mayor O'Dwyer recently recommended that the New York City Board of Education be divorced from the city municipal government. The school board spends too much money these days to be a political asset in New York City.

I am certain that all the chief State school officers would join me in expressing sincere appreciation for Mrs. Meyer's article.

"Union Shop"

A provision of the Taft-Hartley Act requires that before a union shop can be adopted it must be approved by a majority of the employes in a secret election.

The Washington Post, in its June 2 editorial, "Union Shops," concludes that this provision is a "superfluous precaution against coercion of workers" and ought to be repealed. The basis for the conclusion is the fact in April more than 90 percent of the workers casting votes approved the union shop.

Our whole democratic structure is based on the rights of minority groups. Whites make up nearly 90 percent of the population of our country, yet we campaign vigorously for the rights of Negroes. We are trying to combat prejudice against certain religious groups who make up less than 5 percent of our population.

To compel a man to join a labor union strikes at the very roots of our freedom as citizens of a free Nation. It is only a step to compelling him to join a church in order to live within a certain neighborhood, or to join an organization such as the Ku Klux Klan in order to live in safety in a certain community.

The day may come when the workers may tire of their union bosses. When that day comes they should be free to throw off the yoke of oppression. The Taft-Hartley provision enables them to do this merely by withdrawing from membership whenever they desire to do so. It is a good provision and should be retained. H. H. H.

Juvenile Court Judge

Back of the resignations of Miss Virginia Clary and Miss Claire Fagrie from the Juvenile Court staff lies the matter of a political appointment to a position which requires professional competence.

A Juvenile Court judge, like a school principal, must continually make decisions of a highly technical nature; also, in a well-staffed large city court she must be qualified to exercise general supervision over the activities of professionally qualified subordinate personnel.

To select a Juvenile Court judge primarily on the basis of political considerations rather than on the basis of actual qualifications seems as incongruous as it would be to so select an individual to provide medical treatment for patients, or to supervise the medical activities of doctors and graduate nurses.

On "Tolerance"

On June 1 you published a letter from Senator Benton of Connecticut. He told of a series of contests he had sponsored for Connecticut high school students, and he quoted a prize-winning letter from one student, Stephen Schneck. Its subject: Tolerance. It is a good letter and I am glad that it won a prize for Stephen.

But the Senator says, "Originally, the prize for the winner of each contest was a trip to Washington. But then, I ran into the problem of segregation here in the Nation's Capital. That is why . . . the prize had to be a set of the Encyclopedia Britannica."

This is the sort of explanation that comes up again and again when some group or individual is denied (or refused) a trip to Washington because of segregation of races. I presume that the reference is to hotel and restaurant accommodations.

Without in any way approving Washington's customs in this matter, may I ask how many Northern hotels and restaurants welcome Negroes? Perhaps "the Nation's Capital," as such, should lead and not follow. But progress will surely be slow, human nature being what it is, as long as the pots calling this kettle black are decidedly sooty themselves. Senator Benton is obviously a man of good will—and more power to him, say I. What the people in Connecticut say, I can't vouch for. In Greenwich, for instance, Stephen Schneck would find far less tolerance than he would find in Washington.

Point Four Defended

Perhaps no legislation proposed in recent years has been subjected to as high a degree of misinterpretation as has the Point Four program. Many editorial and other writers have recently embarked on flights of fancy as to what it might eventually cost United States taxpayers, while ignoring or misinterpreting the basic planning. As a result, many readers see Point Four as a gigantic "give-away" proposal whereby each Hottentot hut will be equipped with a deep freeze unit and a TV set as gifts from the American taxpayer.

From an examination of the President's message of June 24, 1949, and from many recent interviews with the men charged with the planning of Point Four, I have obtained no support for the alarm sounded by these writers. Point Four can be divided into two rather distinct categories. The technical assistance program, which includes health, educational, survey and training phases, is to be administered in part by the Department of State, through other appropriate Government agencies, and in part by the United Nations; while the investment guarantee program will be administered by the Export-Import Bank.

A gradual increase in appropriations for the technical assistance program will be requested during the first few years of operation. Annual expenditures, estimated to reach a peak in four or five years, might, during that period, rise to several times the presently proposed 35-million-dollar figure, and then gradually decrease toward the original level.

The increase in annual cost during the first few years will result from intensification of the technical aid services. Technical assistance is to be extended on a cooperative basis, and recipient governments are expected to supplement the technical assistance received with domestic programs to be financed by those governments.

The Export-Import Bank has, since its establishment in 1934, been making loans and guarantees to promote the export and import trade of the United States. Its activities are supplementary, rather than competitive, with private capital, and include the financing of technical services and equipment. Point Four will encourage that bank to accelerate those activities and to expand them to include investment guarantees.

The International Bank, authorized at Bretton Woods in 1944, has, since the start of operations in 1946, been granting loans direct to governments, to governmental or quasi-governmental corporations, and to certain private interests when such loans are guaranteed by the borrower's government. Expansion of this type of loan may reasonably be expected as the result of Point Four.

The House Banking and Currency Committee has recommended that a ceiling for outstanding Export-Import Bank guarantees be fixed at 250 million dollars. This sum does not represent, even in part, a taxpayer's burden. It is merely a limit placed on the bank's operations in respect to the issuance of guarantees. Both the International Bank and the Export-Import Bank will continue to make loans on a sound banking rather than on a disguised gratuity basis. Loans by these two banks, as well as Export-Import Bank investment guarantees, will be conducted on a self-liquidating basis. Premiums on investment guarantees will be paid by the investor, and should cover all administrative costs.

The philosophy of "give away" is as foreign to both the International and Export-Import Banks as to any other banking group. Their past records indicate that Point Four operations will be conducted at a profit. This leaves only the technical assistance phase to be borne jointly by the United States and foreign taxpayer. The economic benefits resulting from an increase in world trade, even in the absence of the humanitarian, political, and military considerations, should more than justify the cost.

Brains' Bout With Hunger

By Malvina Lindsay

Shortening Time Table

HE DOESN'T want to think about food for Japanese or Chinese or Hottentots or anyone else. He's full up from a good breakfast — grapefruit, eggs, bacon, toast, coffee with plenty of cream—one he'll tell you that he worked for and earned.

Besides, he'll add, this average man, there's nothing he or anyone else can do about all these out-of-sight hungry people who keep multiplying like rabbits. Why is somebody always bringing up the subject?

For centuries those with ample breakfasts have been similarly dismissing this subject — or doling out dollars in famine relief. But now it's pressing in on them.

Who is going to support Japan's growing surplus of millions? Or offer them quarters for emigration? What if Germany again calls for lebensraum? Where can Italy overflow? Who is going to suppress hunger riots, rebellions, incipient wars on the primitive hunger fronts of the world?

Lack of food is back of most of the trouble in the Far East, reports Director General Norris E. Dodd of the United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organization, recently returned from a five-month visit to the world's backward areas. And he adds that although world population increased 200 million in the last 10 years, the world is raising 3 percent less food than in 1940.

NOBODY has a pat answer to the food versus people dilemma. And if any genius did, it could not be carried out unless public opinion was ready. Hence a movement is under way to arouse people everywhere to thinking about their primary planetary problem. Behind this approach is the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which is promoting "Food and People" as a major topic for study and discussion throughout the world.

Recently several thousand work kits were distributed to community leaders in this country. International relations clubs in high schools and colleges also will wrestle with this enigma. In Italy special courses on the subject are being conducted in three universities. Great Britain, New Zealand, Chile are sponsoring study programs.

This is a democratic approach on a world scale to this most baffling of humanity's problems—one that Earnest A. Hooten, Harvard University anthropologist, recently predicted man would never muster the intelligence and self-control to solve. Yet those directing the UNESCO campaign of study believe the people with good breakfasts under their belts will be shaken out of their lethargy once they realize that each morning there are 68,000 more faces at the breakfast table than there were the day before.

UNESCO discussions will center on how more food can be produced, how it can be distributed to prevent rotting surpluses in some places while people starve elsewhere, how trade agreements can facilitate food movement, the relation of hunger to war, and (especially in the United States) on what Point Four can do to help the one-third of the world's population that goes to bed hungry.

Both the FAO and UNESCO proceed on the theory man by using his mind and the resources of the planet can ultimately bring the production of food up to that of babies. However, many students of population insist limitation of the birth rate is the only answer. Mr. Hooten, who belongs to that school, maintains that human overbreeding is the "basic cause of warfare apart from competition and stupidity."

Action along the birth control line is now being encouraged by the Japanese government. In the last year the rate of population growth has been cut by about 1 percent, Lindesay Parrott recently reported in the New York Times.

But birth limitation has such controversial religious and nationalistic angles that official groups of most governments and of the United Nations usually steer clear of it in their approach to the food and people problem.

There is still a third approach, represented by those grim fatalists who would solve the hunger problem by letting war, famine, disease take care of surplus human beings. However, the fundamental step in saving the world from starvation is to spark man's brain into action on this, the greatest future threat he faces.

Religion In The Home

I was interested in the May 30 letter entitled, "Cause of Delinquency" and heartily agree with the writer in some points. But I do think that the lack of religious instruction in the home is the main cause. Parents need not to be wealthy in order to teach religion in the home, and of course the Bible is the source of Christian teaching.

Abraham Lincoln's mother who was taken away when he was only 9 years of age taught him from the Bible early in life and once said, "I would rather that Abraham owned a Bible than a farm if he could not own both." Statistics show that of all children brought into Juvenile Court, less than 1 percent had been attending Sunday school and next to teaching religion in the home the Sunday school is the best place if it is faithfully taught. Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The British Complexity

THE FRANCO-British differences about the Schuman Plan should not, I believe, be looked upon as more bad news, as another troublesome dispute in this much too troubled world. The differences have long been there and the present argument has not aggravated them. Indeed, given good management in Washington, London, Paris there could come out of this, not only the Franco-German partnership in coal and steel but, a greatly needed clarification of the relationship of the Atlantic community, the Commonwealth, and the European movement for unity.

Lippmann

THE POSITION of the United Kingdom is unique in that, alone among the states of the world, it is an active and leading member in all, excepting only the inter-American, associations of nations. It is in the ERP, the Atlantic Pact, the European Council, the United Nations, and of course the Commonwealth.

No other country belongs to all of these associations. No European country belongs to the Commonwealth, no other British country belongs to the European Council, and only Canada is in the Atlantic Pact. The United States is in the pact, and in ERP, but it is not in the European Council and it is not, of course, in the Commonwealth.

THIS interesting and complicated relationship has led to an impressive, and indeed grand, conception of the British role in the world. London is to be the common center, the great liaison point, where all the international associations are tied together and harmonized. Through London the connections are to be safeguarded and regularized between North America and the European continent, between the United States and the Middle East, between the United States and South Asia. For only Britain has vital interests and old connections and long experience in all these regions and in all their interrelations.

This is a difficult role to play successfully. But I for one think the world would be much worse off than it is if Britain were not attempting to play it. Nevertheless, in the operation of this more than three ring circus, British diplomacy often gives the effect of being unable to concentrate and to be conclusive anywhere because it is pulled by its interests somewhere else. This is the phenomenon which virtually all Britain's friends, allies and partners have run into and are complaining about when they speak of the British tendency to drag their feet. When the British go to the European Council, they seem to be thinking of the Commonwealth and of the Atlantic Pact. When they participate in the Marshall Plan, which is an Atlantic organization, they seem to be thinking of the Commonwealth.

THIS HAS led severe, but not unfriendly, critics in Washington, in Paris, and in many other capitals to feel that British connections are so complex, as compared with British power and resources today, that British policy as it emanates from London tends towards ambiguity and indecision.

All too often, these critics would say, the British participate, sincerely trying to make the thing work but always provided that they do not have to decide to commit themselves very far in order to make it work. The British, the critics say, want to be in everything somewhat but not too far in it lest they be pulled out of something else that they also belong to. Thus they joined the European organization of the Marshall Plan but not in order that it should become a powerful institution for the economic integration of Europe. They would have joined in the discussion of the Schuman Plan. But they would not have participated in order to make it the strong and radical departure it is designed to be. They would have participated in order to keep the idea and the plan deflated to a point where no decisive commitments were required of them.

THE CONTINENTAL countries, led by France, having had long experience, are now taking a quite realistic but entirely friendly attitude towards the British position in the world. They have recognized that Britain will not, and in view of the complexity of British interests and connections that Britain cannot, enter wholeheartedly and deeply into any essentially European project. Therefore the presence of the British in the critical negotiations could lead only to debilitating compromises. For the terms on which Britain could participate in any European organization would so weaken that organization that the great objective of a Franco-German partnership would be lost in the effort to satisfy British interests.

And so, France and Germany and the other continental countries have decided to go ahead without Britain, knowing that Britain can never be a full member of the kind of institution they mean to establish. But they have recognized also that Britain, though it cannot participate fully, must for its own sake and for theirs, participate somewhat.

Therefore, they intend, as I understand it, to work out and to adopt the plan, and then to offer Britain some sort of associate—one might almost say nonresident and non-vetoing—membership in the European system. If that can be done, it will reconcile the European need for deep commitments towards unity with the British inability to make very deep commitments.

Defense of Europe

By Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber
Of Le Monde (Paris).

II. What Kind Of Forces?

THE SOVIET threat to the Atlantic community is unquestionable. But it cannot and must not be treated as a classical military threat by attempting to create an over-all military establishment in the West. Instead it calls for a more complex and articulate action on four counts: Political unity of the Atlantic nations, internal security against the Communist cancer, strategic potential of atomic retaliation, and finally a moderate military establishment in Europe to prevent the possibility of limited aggression. That is the European view of defense.

The problem, then, is to act on each count without undermining the success of the others. Specifically today, after the London meeting, the question is how to build the European defense structure and not provoke, in the process, a resurgence of the anti-Atlantic political forces menacing the unity of the West, or the stalling of internal economic progress strengthening the Communist appeal.

WHAT has come out of the London conference? Two principles, largely under American leadership, on which to build the Western military structure: "balanced collective forces" and "equal shares."

The first one means that each nation should concentrate and specialize on one form of military force. That, of course, can be a very constructive step. It implies a true integration and solidarity of the West, and it should prevent some waste on military expenditures.

The second is based on the fact that the American Administration cannot very well ask Congress for an increase in military expenditures and aid to Europe if the European nations are not going also to make increased sacrifices themselves. It is, in many ways, a sound principle in a community of sovereign democracies.

However, today, only two weeks after the London meeting, the launching of these two principles has already had in Europe devastating political consequences. Indeed, if they are not very carefully handled they can break our community in a period of months.

As they are interpreted today their meaning is first that continental European countries must furnish mainly the ground forces, second that their military ratio (military budget to national income) must be the same as the American one. Applied specifically to France, for instance, it means that France has to put 20 ground divisions in the field by 1952.

Well, it will not. The sooner we face it the better. Nothing is dangerous as to build a community on illusions. It must be said now and clearly that the present interpretation of the two basic principles is inacceptable to Europe.

TO PUT on continental Europe the main responsibility for land armies and restrain largely to the Anglo-Saxon powers the maintenance of the modern forms of weapons (air force, missiles, and A-bombs) reminds the European public of a remarkable precedent in history. The mighty legions of Rome had the monopoly of the famous cavalry chariots, their satellized allies marching in front of them.

In other—and more up-to-date—words, it makes the European people feel like a "military proletariat." That is so deeply felt that in the last weeks in France and Germany the neutrality appeal has boomed all over the country, being sparkplugged by that one emotional argument that the next war would use "European men, and American machines." Also, the present Minister of Defense, Rene Pleven, has had to declare in Parliament that "if the Americans wanted to enforce that principle, he would resign the same day."

Apart from the disastrous psychological impact, it is also obvious that a large ground army is as obsolete a concept as the Maginot Line was last time. That the security problem (of keeping the Communists out) is insoluble with that sort of army, and that it takes a manpower reserve out of the production machine that we cannot afford.

THE SECOND principle is also, politically and economically, dynamite. It is, of course, desirable that the different Atlantic nations should make comparable sacrifices for the common security. But to imply that the European economies should be put an equal ratio of the national income into military expenditures as the American one, is highly questionable.

After the devastation of two wars, the stagnation in economic progress for a whole generation, the European economic potential can in no way be judged the American standards. Just one example: the total national wealth of France is today less than half of what it was in 1914. Also, in France, Germany or Italy, today, the state or private investments into productive economic development are all but stalled.

Of course, it is always possible, whatever the circumstances, to bleed the national resources further; but it then implies a different form of political framework. In other words, such a military program, if enforced, will mean at least completely state-controlled economies and probably a form of neo-facism on the continent. It is interesting to note that the only countries in Europe today able to maintain large ground armies are Communist Yugoslavia, and Fascist Spain.

NEUTRALITY or neo-fascism, and probably both because they go very logically together, can then very easily be the outcome of the present military conception in Europe.

Of course, that does not mean that Europe should not share in the common security effort. Indeed it must. But it can do so only by combining efficiency with the greatest economy in money and much more in men. This means by being allowed to receive and maintain the most developed technological weapons. It means that the crux of the European forces should not be obsolete armored divisions but a large tactical jet air force using tactical atomic weapons. Besides, England first, then France are bound to abandon the old, heavy, inefficient and very unsecure system of universal military training. This is inevitably the era of small and super-armed career armies.

It is now whispered unofficially that the American policy will eventually evolve to the point of sharing exactly that conception for Europe. We are confident that that is probable. But what is certain is that, in the meantime, it should not take more than a few months of the present conception to wreck the political unity of the Atlantic world.

Loyalty Program

By Marquis Childs

Expressions Of Nonconfidence

A GROUP of six Germans were invited by the State Department recently to visit this country to make a study of civil liberties. In Washington they explored the loyalty program with typical German thoroughness.

Childs

In the course of a study of the top Loyalty Review Board of which Seth Richardson is chairman, they were turned over to an underling for a discussion of the gradations of loyalty. He somewhat confused the Germans by using terms such as pinko and fellow-traveler, which were outside the sphere of their political knowledge. Finally, after the word pinko had recurred several times, one of the visitors asked for a definition.

"Well," said the underling, "I think I can explain it. A pinko is anybody who is opposed to racial segregation and who wants to fight for civil liberties."

Those are very nearly the exact words used and they were duly taken down by the Germans in their notebooks and recorded in the reports they were preparing to take home with them. After this incident, which was acutely embarrassing to their official chaperones, they were asked if they didn't want to go and talk with several of the lawyers who were defending, for the most part without fees, some of the innocent persons who had fallen afoul of the loyalty machinery.

No, said the German visitors, there was no need for that. After all, they now had the official point of view.

THIS might not be so serious—it even has its comic aspect—if it were not indicative of the climate of the time. The fear of communism and the Communist conspiracy, both in its realities and in the sensationalism and suspicion whipped up for partisan political purposes, is encroaching on basic American freedoms and rights. Driven by this fear, we may become like the totalitarianism we profess to loathe.

The loyalty program under the chairmanship of Richardson, a Republican with views out of the early Coolidge era, has been carried through faithfully and thoroughly. If it has been pushed at times with excessive zeal, that is a further guarantee that the individuals found to be disloyal do really represent the tiny drop of disloyalty in the vast ocean of Government.

But the other day Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer cut directly across this carefully worked-out program. He dismissed two employes for inefficiency while their cases were waiting further loyalty review.

The seriousness of this has scarcely been realized. The procedures set up under the loyalty program were meant to purge the Government of disloyal employes, but at the same time they were meant to protect the right of the individual from summary dismissal which would do such serious damage to his reputation as virtually to destroy him.

In yielding to congressional pressure, Sawyer was, in effect, declaring his lack of confidence in the program. Senator George Malone of Nevada, who has made communism in the Commerce Department his special homework, took shrewd advantage of this blunder, announcing that now it was obvious the entire department needed investigating. Secretary Sawyer went even further in offhand remarks to White House reporters, saying he thought Congress should modify the function of the Civil Service Commission and give Government departments the right to hire and fire employes.

THE ACTION seems to have been particularly unjust in the case of William W. Remingon, who has been cleared at least twice. He was cleared on one occasion by a top loyalty review panel consisting of Chairman Richardson, Harry Colmery, former national commander of the American Legion, and George Alger, member of a conservative Wall Street law firm.

Remington has been subjected not to double jeopardy but at least to triple jeopardy, contrary, as Senator Margaret Chase Smith pointed out, to basic concepts of Western law and justice. At the time Sawyer publicly fired him, Remington was before a Federal grand jury in New York as a result of renewed publicity by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In the New York Times Magazine Drew Middleton, writing from Germany, had a searching analysis of the attitude of Europeans toward Americans and the questions that arise in European minds as to whether American strength is what Europe has been led to believe it is. Middleton writes:

"Behind these questions is the fear, expressed bluntly and fully by only a few, that the United States in its almost hysterical fear of communism will turn more and more to authoritarian measures to fight it and that once this is done we will force Europe to conform to our pattern. And that, they claim, will mean the end of the great European tradition just as surely as would an invasion by the Russians.

"'The great weapon of the United States in its struggle with the Soviet Union is not the atomic bomb or ECA,' a Dutch diplomat once told me. 'It is that, with all its failings, the United States stands in the world for justice and freedom. As long as these exist and their existence is demonstrated in your daily life, the free world will turn to you for leadership. But if America, for fear or expediency, denies these things then you—and we—are lost.'"

All one can say to that is: Amen!

Child Falls From Window; Is 2d Victim

Four-year-old Patricia Smith was seriously injured yesterday morning when she fell out of a second-story window at her home, 27 8th st. se., while trying to talk to another youngster in the street below.

Patricia

The child was removed by a passer-by to Casualty Hospital, two blocks away, where she was admitted with a broken right thigh and broken left arm.

Last night, an earlier fall victim, 3-year-old Judy Dubreuil, was still in serious condition at Casualty Hospital after a tumble from the bedroom window of her home, 715 A st ne., Tuesday.

3-Year Term Is Suspended In Threat Case

Nevin G. Bachman, retired Alexandria insurance man, pleaded guilty in the United States Court at Alexandria yesterday to using the mails with intent to extort and to convey threats. He received a three-year suspended sentence.

Bachman, who lives at 1121 Portner rd., was indicted Monday on a charge of sending identical copies of a threatening letter to Judge Paul E. Brown, of the Fairfax County Circuit Court; State Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Belle Haven, and State Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria.

After hearing the defendant express his regret for his "hasty action," Judge Albert V. Bryan suspended sentence for a three-year period pending Bachman's good behavior.

Bachman, according to the Government, threatened to injure the reputations of the three unless any or all of them paid him $950. He accused all three of collusion in settlement of a damage suit in which he was involved in Fairfax County Court in 1947.

In the suit, which resulted in a judgment against Bachman for damages arising from an automobile accident, he was represented by Boothe while the owners of the other vehicle were represented by Clarke. Judge Brown presided, although a jury determined the outcome.

The $950 demanded by Bachman in his letter to the three was for damages to his own automobile, Judge Bryan was told.

After withdrawing his not guilty plea yesterday, Bachman told Judge Bryan he wished to retract the statements he had made in the letter, saying he had written the letter after "losing his head."

Falls Church Clears Way for School Grant

The Falls Church School Board last night cleared the way to receive a $38,000 grant-in-aid from Virginia under the plan proposed by Gov. John S. Battle and passed by the General Assembly.

The board authorized School Superintendent Irvin S. Schmitt to prepare a four-year plan of operation. The plan must be submitted to the State before the grant can be received.

The $38,000 would be used for school construction and repair.

Arlington To Sell 4 Old Schoolhouses

The Arlington School Board voted last night to put up for sale four of its oldest elementary school buildings.

Located in commercial zones and accommodating about 1200 pupils, the schools are Thomas Nelson Page, at 4001 Wilson blvd.; Matthew Maury, at 3550 Wilson blvd.; Woodrow Wilson, at 1601 Wilson blvd., and Cherrydale, at 3710 Lee hwy.

Assistant School Superintendent Charles Walsh explained that all four schools are on major thoroughfares in the midst of heavy traffic, are in need of expensive repairs and are probably more valuable as commercial property.

Will Construct Substitutes

The board voted to receive offers for the buildings only at dates which would allow construction of suitable substitute facilities. Prospective purchasers could not occupy any of the buildings before une 15, 1951, Superintendent Early said.

School officials said no new construction on replacements would begin until contracts were signed for sale of the old buildings.

In other actions last night, the board agreed to spend $64,729 for 19 school buses, which Early said would allow a "more flexible program" in the schools.

Operation of the buses will permit students at senior high schools to attend seven periods in an eight-period day on a staggered schedule, which Early said will "probably" be necessary next year because of overcrowding.

Bus transportation is now furnished by the A. B. & W. Bus Co. and Arnold Lines. Recent fare increases granted by the State Corporation Commission have raised the school fare from 5 to 10 cents per pupil one-way trip.

In other actions, the school board:

1. Appointed Levin B. Hanigan to be principal of BMarcroft and Glencarlyn Schools, and Miss Lillian Lambert to be principal of the Fairlington School.

2. Set June 29 as the date for a conference of representatives from county civic groups to discuss, "Are We Building the Kind of Schools Our Community Wants?"

Jury Disagrees in Car Death

A Municipal Court jury yesterday was unable to agree in the negligent homicide case against Paul Joseph Barrett, 19, 5000 4th st. nw., and Evans Alexander Black, 46, 1515 West Virginia ave. ne.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy declared a hung jury and dismissed the jurors a little more than two hours after they took the case. She said she had been told by the jurors that a verdict was impossible.

The men were on trial for the January 27 traffic death of Charles Jackson, 60, of 777 Kenyon st. nw., at Sherman ave., and Kenyon st. nw.

Barrett is a timekeeper for the Potomac Electric Power Co., and was driving a Pepco truck which collided with a Gray Top cab driven by Black.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph A. Somers said the Pepco truck veered into a lamppost and hit Jackson, who was standing at the intersection. Jackson suffered broken ribs, fractured legs and a fractured skull. He was dead when an ambulance arrived.

Women's Club Gives $500 to Corporation

The Jefferson Village Women's Club last night presented a check for $500 to the nonprofit Park Corporation of Jefferson Village for construction of a playgrund in the community, near Falls Church, Va.

George Herzog, president of the Park Corporation, accepted the check from Mrs. James Ward, Ward, president of the Women's club, at a meeting at the home of Mrs. John Newland, 625 Jefferson ave., Falls Church, Va. The $500 was raised by sale of tickets for a fashion show.

Tariff Cuts Opposed By Textile Industry

The domestic cotton textile industry yesterday unanimously opposed proposals for lower tariffs in new reciprocal trade agreements.

Representatives from every segment of the trade told a committee on reciprocity information, preparing for negotiation of new trade pacts at Torquay, England, in September, that mill closures and further unemployment would result from lowered duties.

DRAFT OR BOTTLED—IT'S THE SAME EXTRA-FINE BEER!

Enjoy that Old Time "On-Tap"

Draft Beer Flavor

in Bottles and Cans

Old Georgetown

Premium Quality Beer

Prove to yourself that this is the finest glass of beer you ever tasted

Are you skeptical? Try the "Tap Taste" Test yourself and be convinced that here is a great beer that will be your favorite from now on. Not only that—you'll do yourself a favor too. For once you've enjoyed the refreshing goodness of a cool glass of Old Georgetown, you'll realize that in Washington you don't need to pay a premium price for premium quality beer. You enjoy the same extra fine beer in bottles and cans that many say is the finest tasting draft beer on tap today!

Let your own taste be the judge Switch to Old Georgetown today

From now on you can enjoy at home that old time "on tap" taste that makes every glassful of beer as smooth and flavorful as if it came right out of the keg. Ask for Old Georgetown in your favorite package store today. Keep it always on hand for home enjoyment . . . and when you go to your favorite tavern ask for Old Georgetown on draft, too.

Buy some while you still have another brand on hand . . . compare them and you'll see why we say "No other beer has that Old Time 'On Tap' Taste"

CHR. HEURICH BREWING CO., WASHINGTON, D. C.

*Behind-the-Bar Test Convinces Experts

"Can you taste the difference?" we asked Washington bar owners. Behind the bar we filled a glass with Old Georgetown Beer poured from a bottle.

Another glass was filled with Old Georgetown draft beer from the keg. "Can you taste the difference between Draft and Bottled?" we asked.

One glass . . . then the other . . . was tasted. In every case the answer was the same. "Both have that good draft beer taste!"

If you agree draft beer tastes better—prove to yourself Old Georgetown really seals in real draft beer flavor in bottles and cans.

Fairfax Board Votes to Hire Research Expert to Aid Study

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday appropriated a sum not to exceed $5000 for employment of a research expert to aid a commission studying the county's form of government.

The appropriation, requested by David Lawrence, chairman of the 21-member study commission, is subject to a legal ruling from Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh, who has asked Virginia Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., to determine legality of the fund.

The expenditure, according to Lawrence, would be used for employment of an expert to give the commission necessary information on forms of county government available under State law. He pointed out that members of the commission primarily are businessmen, who do not have time

The commission has been with making recommendations on the advisability of changing the present form of county government.

The supervisors also approved, without a formal vote, the appointment of Dr. Elmer Waring of Fairfax as county jail physician to succeed Dr. Nelson Podolnick, who relinquished that post when he resigned as county coroner May 1. R. M. Loughborough, county executive secretary, told the board it had been necessary to obtain the services of several private physicians to meet jail needs since Dr. Podolnick's resignation.

The board approved unanimously an ordinance which, on June 18 put the county officially on daylight-saving time. Passage of the ordinance which legally had to be advertised for three consecutive weeks in county papers, was delayed because of uncertainty whether the District would adopt "fast" time.

It Snowed in Idaho

Idaho Falls, Idaho, June 7 (AP).—Enough snow fell here today to leave the ground white. That was just a day after the temperature climbed to an afternoon high of 83.

Fiancee in Jail for Soliciting, Her Intended Drowns Sorrow

The scheduled marriage of Shirley Ann Biggs, 30-year-old Norfolk waitress convicted of soliciting prostitution Tuesday, received a new setback in Municipal Court yesterday.

The groom-to-be was convicted of being drunk.

Elwood Wilson, 27, 1022 9th st., nw., was picked up in the Courthouse park at 5th and E sts. nw., five hours after his "fiancee" had been convicted, and only two hours before he said they were scheduled to be married.

Wilson appeared at Miss Biggs' trial Tuesday, waving what he said was a marriage certificate and asking Judge Armond W. Scott to impose a small fine. Judge Scott gave her $25 or 30 days, and Wilson left, saying he would try to raise the money in time for the 6:30 p. m. ceremony.

At 4:30 p. m. Tuesday, Wilson was arrested and sent to the No. 1 Precinct cell block, 1000 yards from the Municipal Court cell block in which Miss Biggs languished.

Wilson paid the $1 fine imposed on him yesterday by Judge Aubrey B. Fennell and left the Courthouse without speaking to reporters. Miss Biggs was still in jail at the end of the court day.

She was convicted of soliciting prostitution from Vice Squad Officer Louis A. Fouchett in the 1100 block of 11th st., at 1:15 a. m., the morning of the scheduled ceremony.

Lawyers Ask Repeal Of Search Warrant Law

Annapolis, Md., June 7 (AP).—Two legislators, appearing as lawyers, today asked the Court of Appeals to strike down Maryland's old search warrant law.

State Senator John Grason Turnbull (D., Baltimore County) and Delegate Jerome Robinson (D., Baltimore 4th) said the law was unconstitutional.

Nonsegregated Pools Open; All Orderly

Three Interior Department swimming pools opened quietly yesterday on a nonsegregated basis with no incidents reported.

The pools, opened to the public on the daily 3 p. m. to 6 p. m. schedule, were East Potomac, Banneker and McKinley. When schools close the pools will open at 1 p. m. weekdays and 10 a. m. weekends.

Guards reported opening day's attendance considerably below last year's opener, but explained the 1949 season began on a Saturday which always draws more children and Government workers.

Checks at the pools yesterday showed about 100 white children and 2 or 3 Negroes used East Potomac; about 200 Negroes and 12 white children were at McKinley and slightly more than 500 swam at Banneker, all of whom were Negroes.

Mission Board Hits Methods Of Asia Reds

Massanetta Springs, Va., June 7 (AP).—The Southern Presbyterian Church's Board of World Missions reported communism's "rapid rise and spread," especially in Asia, is the "most ominous and far-reaching" development confronting the board's work today.

"The incompatibility of orthodox communism with vital Christianity must be apparent, even to the casual observer," the board said in the annual missions report.

The board said that communism "does not seek to propagate itself by the peaceful means" employed by Christianity, but rides "upon a wave of class hatred, economic tyranny, political force and military aggression."

The board said Christianity, on the other hand, "pursues a deeper and more lasting strategy," building upon loyalty, conviction and faith.

In Japan the first enthusiastic rush toward Christianity that followed the war has subsided but "there still is an open-heartedness toward the Gospel that is little short of amazing, in contrast with the indifference that characterized the prewar years," the board said. It cited as a factor the "moderation and generosity" of American occupation.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (nonacid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

D. C. Bankers At Greenbrier For Convention

By S. Oliver Goodman

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 7.—More than 200 Washington bankers, their wives and guests arrived here tonight at The Greenbrier to register for the opening tomorrow of the thirty-second annual convention of the D. C. Bankers Association.

They came by a special train of the Chesapeake & Ohio, while another 160 are expected by motor or a later train.

Among the highlights of the first day's session will be talks by George M. Fisher, retiring association president; Joseph W. Dodge, president of the Detroit Bank and international financial expert, and Stephen O. Porter, retiring president of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Defense Department, and Franklin D. Richards, commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration, are scheduled to speak Friday.

The concluding session on Saturday will include a talk by Ralph Bradford, executive vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; election and installation of new association officers, reports of various committees and a "family dinner."

The bankers will return Sunday night by another special C. & O. train. Chairman of convention arrangements is George A. Didden, Jr., president of the National Capital Bank.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—A new high for nearly two years was set by cash oats while oats futures raced to new seasonal peaks on the Board of Trade today.

Oats stood out in an otherwise mixed market. After a day of brisk trading and conflicting price trends, wheat and soybeans ended a little easier while corn and rye joined oats on the advance. Lard finished mostly lower.

Wheat closed ⅜ to 1 cent lower, corn was ¾-⅞ higher, oats were 1¼-1⅜ higher, rye was 1 to 1⅛ higher, soybeans were unchanged to 1¼ lower and lard was 13 cents lower to 2 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Only 12 cars of oats arrived, and they met a very strong demand on gains of 1 to 3 cents a bushel. All oats offered for sale brought more than $1.00. Top price was $1.03¾ for No. 1 white heavy, best figure for oats here since July 13, 1948.

SEC Asked to Speed A.P.&L. Liquidation

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday was asked to speed up the liquidation of American Power and Light Co., New York holding company.

The request came in a petition filed by a stockholder, H. Lane Ogle, asking SEC to order the distribution to stockholders of all assets of the multi-million-dollar utility system.

Ogle asked specifically that the commission consider at hearings scheduled June 12 whether American Power should immediately distribute its holdings in Washington Water Power Co., of Spokane.

Pennsy's Record Diesel

Lima, Ohio, June 7 (AP).—Lima-Hamilton Corp. has delivered to the Pennsylvania Railroad the first of 11 2500-horsepower Diesel electric transfer locomotives which the line has on order.

The Diesel is said to be the first 2500-hosepower locomotive built in this country and the second largest Diesel electric ever built as a single unit.

McKeldin May Yet Run For Governor of Maryland

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—The big question in Maryland politics, GOP division, may be answered in a few days with an announcement by Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin that he will run for Governor.

The Evening Sun said today that several friends and advisers talked it over yesterday with the former Baltimore Mayor in a secret session at his office.

The paper said participants in the meeting indicated McKeldin will make a decision within two weeks and it probably will be a decision to run.

Two Republicans already in the race are State Senator Roy Tasco Davis of Montgomery County and D. John Markey, the Frederick countian who came close to winning a United States Senate seat.

McKeldin has been the big question mark among the Republicans because he has run before and is generally conceded to be the best ready-made vote getter the GOP has.

And, in a speech prepared for the Eleventh Ward Democratic Club of Baltimore, he said:

"People who try to tell you . . . the things that ought to be done in Maryland, and which are being done, can be done without the funds to pay for them, are taking the calculated risk of insulting the intelligence of the electorate of Maryland."

Still in the aggressive tone of his campaign kick-off last week, the Governor called the sales tax a life-giving blood transfusion."

Aiming most of his speech toward Baltimore, the Governor said the city's tax rate would be $4.21 instead of $2.88 without $24,575,792 received from State-collected taxes.

Open House Today

The Cherrydale School, 3710 Lee hwy., Arlington, will hold an open house from 2 to 4 p. m. today, for all preschool children and their parents.

Lane Defends Sales Tax In Baltimore Address

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—Governor Lane again stoutly defended Maryland's sale tax tonight in his second reelection campaign speech.

The 2-percent retail tax saved Baltimore and the counties from "ruinous" real-estate taxes, he said.

Claudette Deftly Goes Off Trolley

By Richard L. Coe

NOW IT'S CLAUDETTE COLBERT'S turn to go looney, which she does with considerable abandon in Keith's "The Secret Fury."

In this one you too would be driven batty by the things up with which Claudette has to put. Just as no less than a bishop is asking that fateful question of the marriage ceremony—"If there be any here present . . . "—up steps a fellow to stop the ceremony. He's got proof that Claudette married a pal of his only last March, which seems to be all news to Claudette.

With Bridegroom Robert Ryan, Aunt Jane Cowl and such family friends as Paul Kelly and Philip Ober, Claudette sets out to see the alleged marriage license, to find that it seems only too true—her signature, people who witnessed the ceremony, small, tangible proofs.

And finally she uncovers the alleged husband. Going into a room alone with him, shes found a few moments later with a hot rod and a late husband at her feet. After a murder trial that will curdle the blood of any respectable lawyer, D. A. or judge, Claudette goes off her trolley in the witness box and it looks like life in a nuthouse for Our Heroine.

Fortunately, however, Robert Ryan, after rather a bashful start, knuckles into the case with the manly vigor we've come to expect of him, and uncovers some skullduggery that spins the plot along to a finish.

"THE SECRET FURY." RKO-Radio release presented by Jack H. Skirball and Bruce Manning. Produced by Skirball. Screen play by Lionel Houser. Story by Jack R. Leonard and James O'Hanlon. Photographed by Leo Tover. Music by Roy Webb. Directed by Mel Ferrer. At Keith's.

THE CAST

Ellen	Claudette Colbert
David	Robert Ryan
Aunt Clara	Jane Cowl
District Attorney	Paul Kelly
Kent	Philip Ober
Dr. Twining	Elisabeth Risdon
Belle the Blonde	Doris Dudley
Randall	Dave Barbour
Leah	Vivian Vance

Since the advertisements make much of the last seven minutes of Claudette's ordeal, it would be unchivalrous to unveil the story of Jack B. Leonard and James O'Hanlon further. Certainly one sticks through it with the eyes open if not exactly on stalks, which is, I presume, rather something in its favor.

However, apart from the surprise angle of the yarn it is not ungallant to complain that there are some mighty woolly moments along the way, especially those involving the legal trial and the psychiatric incidents. And the holes in that wool are yards wide.

Jane Cowl Scores

Claudette does quite a job with her mad scene, the sort of performance such sisters in misery as Joan Crawford, Barbara Stanwyck and Bette Davis would relish. Her wide-eyed terror and Jane Cowl's ineffable dignity are likely to carry you over stretches o fthe script.

The others play exactly as the parts are written, which is not to say they are sensible beings. And isn't that Willard Parker as a thug without benefit of cast sheet billing? If not, RKO, who be he and why the anonymity of a familiar face?

WITH PETE SMITH yesterday was one of those faces you're likely to spot and spend the rest of the day wondering where you've seen him . . . It belongs to David O'Brien, a tall, tan Texan who plays the baffled Mr. Average in all those Pete Smith short subjects . . . Because he doesn't get noticeable billing in those 40-odd "Specialties" he's made with Pete, you're more likely to know his puzzled phizz than his name . . . He also writes and directs the shorts with Pete, is a yachtsman in his spare time and a lot of people seem to think he's Pete . . . It's Smith's dry voice you hear in the pictures . . . Occasion of the visit was presentation of honors from the President's Council on Industrial Safety for Pete's latest, "Wrong Way Butch," which will be along next month . . . "WWB" has long been a familiar character of doing key jobs, and the short was made by request of Secretary of Labor Tobin . . . The Secretary hosted the group in his office for lunch after presentation of the awards.

THE TRANS-LUX announces its next: "The Winslow Boy," Terence Rattigan's adaption of his fine play which opened the National's final season as a Guild subscription play . . . This British film, with Cedric Hardwick and Robert Donat, will follow "The Bicycle Theft" on Friday the 16th.

THE COLLINGWOOD Theater, on the Mount Vernon Highway, has opened its second comedy, Mark Reed's "Yes, My Darling Daughter." . . . It's the story of a college girl who, finding some of her mother's Bohemian premarriage writings, decides to do as suggested, with results not pleasing to Mama . . . Natalie Priest and Eugene Mario are the parents, Fran Benton the girl and Producer Edmund Jordan the young mah . . . Others in the cast include Lee Bergere, Elizabeth and Patience Winthrop . . Seats downtown at Brentano's (Mrs. Stabler's in Brentano's) and at the National Pipe Shop on E st. , . As Violet Heming, Washington's Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark was the star of the original production.

THE NEW YORK Avenue Presbyterian Church's Community Club Children's Theater will present Ken Scollon's "The Purple Fan" Friday and Saturday nights at 8:15 in the Undercroft auditorium of the Mount Vernon Church, 9th st. and Mass. ave. nw.

TONIGHT: "The Skipper Surprised His Wife," that comedy about a Navy officer who showed how to keep house the Navy way, gets a gala unspooling at the Capitol at 8:45; it opens this morning, but there'll be special guests this evening in the loges to meet Author William J. Lederer, commander, U. S. N. . . . "Power Without Glory," produced by the Washington Theater Alliance, opens a three-night run at the Arlington Farms Recreation Hall.

Strike-Bound Plant Wrecked by Blasts

Yonkers, N. Y., June 7 (U.P.).—A paint distributing plant which has been under guard for three months to prevent strike violence was wrecked today by three explosions and a fire.

Detective Capt. Joseph Dominico ordered an immediate arson investigation.

Police said there were no known casualties in the explosions at the E. Rabinowe & Co., wholesale paint firm.

A night watchman, the only employe on duty in the 100-foot-long, one?story structure escaped.

The blasts awakened residents over a three-mile area. Telephone service to nearby homes and businesses was knocked out.

Origin of the explosions had not been determined. Fire department officials said large quantities of paint chemicals caught fire. It took 40 minutes for nine companies of firemen to extinguish the blaze.

The plant has been the scene of several outbreaks of violence since 30 AFL truck drivers and helpers struck months ago following an attempt to organize the company's salesmen.

Guard Troops Quitting Tenn. Strike Scene

Morristown, Tenn., June 7 (AP).—National Guard troops began withdrawing from the strike-ridden American Enka Corp. plant here today on orders from Gov. Gordon Browning.

Browning yesterday ordered the withdrawal after receiving the assurance of union officials that there will be no more violence at the rayon plant.

The Governor said some of the 220 guardsmen will be sent home while others will move to the Morristown Armory 5 miles away.

The Textile Workers Union of America (CIO) urged an immediate Senate investigation of what it called the use of guardsmen to "terrorize" the strikers.

The request was made in a statement submitted by Emil Rieve, TWUA president, to a Labor-Management Relations Subcommittee of the Senate Labor Committee.

Several members of the committee studied the situation yesterday, but they will not make a decision until an entire group meeting is held Tuesday, Chairman Murray (D., Mont.), said.

For Apartments

Rezoning Is Asked For Area

The District Zoning Commission was urged by its advisory council yesterday to rezone for apartments 15 acres north of Missouri ave. nw., between 14th and 16 sts.

Half the area consists of Vinegar Hill, a longtime Negro community on Rock Creek Ford rd. Robert O. Clouser, member of the Zoning Advisory Council, said homes there had no sewers nor water, and that the community has been considered for a redevelopment project.

Clouser reported the council felt investors might buy and develop the property if apartments were permitted. The council also pointed out that most nearby land was zoned for apartments.

The area is bounded by Sheridan st., 14th st., Missouri ave., Military rd., and a line 100 feet east of 16th st.

The council made its proposal after a builder applied for rezoning of two acres at the edge of the area for apartment construction. James C. Wilkes, attorney for Jack Pollin, said a one-million-dollar 130-unit project is planned facing 14th st.

The commission took this request and 10 others under consideration following a hearing. Others included the following:

(1) Trustees for the estate of Robert Stead who, in 1943, left a half-acre tract at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. for a public playground, asked rezoning of a small portion to make the entire tract commercial. A. Murray Preston, attorney, said it is planned to lease the land to a chain store.

(2) The Army and Navy Club asked rezoning to commercial use of its building, 17th and I sts. nw., so it can place an awning on its roof garden. The awning would put the building 7 feet over the residential area limit.

Boy Rescues—A Barrel

Minneapolis, Minn., June 7 (U.P.). Leslie Birg, 17, believed he saw a man floundering in the Mississippi River. He stripped off most of his clothing, scrambled down girders of a bridge, dived 30 feet into the water and swam out to —a barrel.

Many Seek Juvenile Court Jobs

Juvenile Court is getting many applications for key positions left vacant by the "protest" resignations of two women at the court.

They are Misses Virginia Clary, social service director, and Clare Fagrie, chief probation officer, who resigned after differences with Judge Edith H. Cockrill over punitive measures meted out juvenile offenders they said. Judge Cockrill said that she had asked Miss Clary to resign for "inefficiency."

It was learned that since news of the resignations became public, applications have been arriving steadily.

Meanwhile, staff members at the court have been compiling figures on reformatory commitments and other data which, Judge Cockrill says, will explain the true situation at the court. The report probably will be ready late this week.

The Juvenile Court Advisory Committee will meet in closed session today to discuss the controversy at the court, members said.

Man-Made 'Fuel Line' Aids Heart

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Surgeons have kept dogs alive as long as 35 minutes solely on blood routed through a built-in "fuel line" to their hearts, it was reported here yesterday.

Significance of the feat, said Dr. Claude S. Beck, pioneer heart surgeon, is its demonstration of the value of his operation to strengthen hearts weakened by coronary disease.

The Beck operation, first reported here in October, 1948, consists of constructing an auxiliary "fuel line" outside the heart from a section of the patient's own arm vein.

It has since been perfected till it is now ready for use on humans by any skilled surgeon, Dr. Beck yesterday told doctors assembled here. He spoke at the 28th annual session of the Association of Former Internes of Freedmen's Hospital, in the hospital auditorium.

Besides advocating general use of his operation, Dr. Beck, professor of neurosurgery at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, predicted spectacular advances in heart surgery.

"Within the next few years," he declared, "surgeons will be able to keep the brain alive while they stop the heart, enter and repair it, and start it going again, all without damage to the brain or body."

He said also that surgeons soon may be routinely transplanting sections of the aorta, the body's main artery. The aortic sections, he said, will be taken from bodies of healthy persons, after accidental death, and used to replace diseased aortic sections of the living. Several such operations have recently been reported.

In the recent animal tests of his operation, he explained, all normal blood supply to the dog's heart muscles was stopped by tying off the coronary arteries, the heart's own feeding network. Nevertheless, he said, the animals with the special vein grafts continued to live on blood supplied their hearts through "the new coronary circulation system."

Since the vein graft operation is designed solely as a heart-feeding help, the fact that it has been shown capable of sustaining life on its own is surgical testimonial to its worth, Dr. Beck said.

The operation, he reported, already has been used successfully on five of seven patients. It is designed for cases of coronary insufficiency, the major cause of heart disease deaths, where needed blood for the heart muscles is denied those muscles.

A one-to-three inch section of the arm vein is used for the heart "fuel line." The surgeon connects one end of this to the aorta, and the other to the tissue-thin sinus vein on the heart's surface. The sinus vein normally serves as the drain-off vein in the coronary network to return used blood to the heart.

Connected to the aorta, with its greater pressure of arterial blood, the vein now serves to supply fresh blood backward through the feeding network to reach those heart areas cut off by disease damage to the normal supply routes.

The three-day scientific and alumni reunion program at Freedmen's Hospital will be concluded today.

Agriculture Makes Survey Of Diabetes

A detection survey to uncover hidden diabetes among personnel of the Agriculture Department is now under way in this city.

By its completion, early in July, the department's 9000 Washington employes and 2000 others in service at Beltsville, Md., are expected to participate. It marks the first time a Federal department has undertaken such a survey, officials said.

The survey is under the direction of Dr. Melvin T. Johnson, director of the health division of the Department of Agriculture. He is assisted by Miss Anna Turek, public health nurse with the department.

Conducted on a voluntary basis, the survey has reached an average of 70 to 75 percent of three bureaus already covered, Miss Turek reported yesterday. These include the Bureau of Experimental Stations, the Office of Solicitors, and the Division of Industrial Chemistry. Today, the drive begins in the department's Bureau of Forest Service.

In the campaign, each employe is given a specimen bottle and memorandum of instructions and purposes of the survey. These are returned to the health division for urinalysis test. Where indications of possible diabetes are found in the tests, those employes are interviewed by the bureau physician, and referred to their private physicians for diagnosis, Miss Turek explained.

Yanks Beat Hal Newhouser, Regain Lead, 5 to 4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE MAN WHO beats Sammy Snead is supposed to win the National Open title at Philadelphia this week, and you can say, too, that Snead has himself to conquer. Militating against him is his custom of blowing the Open, the only important title he has never won.

Snead is as famous for his failures to win the Open as he is for his ability to hit a golf ball better than any contemporary. And at Philadelphia he is returning to the town where in 1939 he fluffed his finest chance to become the Open champion. That was the year when, needing a par five on the 72d hole, the world's best golfer soared to a duffer's eight.

POVICH

That Snead wants this title more than any other, is understandable. By this time, the crack, "but he's never won the National Open," hypercritical as it may be, has begun to irk Slammin' Sammy. He'd like to nail that one this week at the Merion Cricket Club.

Even a faint resemblance of a good last round by Snead would have won him the crown at Canterbury in Cleveland in 1940. But he posted a dismal 81 and finished eight strokes back. The closest he ever came to the crown was in 1947 at St. Louis. He blew a 30-inch putt and the title to Lew Worsham in the play-off.

AT MERION, Snead is expected to get his severest challenge from Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan with Hogan probably the sentimental favorite. Snead knows how tough Demaret can be, and that dapper Jimmy is now at the top of his game. They are probably the two extremes among the top pros—Snead struggling on all the greens, and Demaret the guy who scarcely bothers to sight his putts in the Hagen philosophy of "if you're going to miss 'em, miss 'em quick."

A new kind of Ben Hogan will be challenging Snead and Demaret. Little Ben, recovered from the automobile accident that nearly cost him his life, and deeply thankful that he can play golf at all, has discarded what used to be the grimmest of all approaches to the game.

"I'm more relaxed than I ever was in my life," said Hogan recently at the National Celebrities tournament, "and now I'm enjoying the game more than I ever did."

Hogan still retains all his good shots and with his new outlook on the game has divested himself of much of the pressure that he formerly carried with him. "Ben has added a smile to his game, and that makes him a tougher competitor," observed Bob Harlow, editor of Golf World, at the Celebs tourney.

MERION ISN'T one of the fast-track courses where the pros can finish as far back as tenth if they complete the 72 holes in the low 280s. The last time the Open was won at Merion, 16 years ago, by Olin Dutra, it was with a total of 293, an average of more than 73 for each 18 holes. The test there this week will offer something of a line on the present crop versus the oldsters.

This week's field will have to contend with that luxuriant Merion rough, which was duck-soup to the old pros but a novelty to most of the moderns who have been accustomed to close-cropped courses. They've been complaining all week of the hard time the rough has been giving 'em, although the ancients insist that "these fellows never did know how to make the most of bad lies like the pros of our time."

Snead is favored by the necessity for keeping his shots on the fairway, because he customarily is on the beam, but obviously not in his favor are the half-acre greens at Merion which put the putter under pressure. Little Hogan, with control of his long clubs that matches Snead's, will not be pressurized in the same measure by those big greens because nobody in pro ranks outputts Hogan.

THE MODERN crop of pros is given to muttering when they card as high as a 73 in tournament play, but back in 1934, Gene Sarazen was leading the field going into the final 18, with rounds of 73-72-73. The ultimate winner was Olin Dutra, who started with a 76-74 yet won the tournament without bettering 71 in any round.

Dutra beat out Sarazen by one stroke, and Gene traces his defeat to the infamous eleventh hole, labeled Baffling Brook, with a creek traversing the line of play at a 45-degree angle. On that par four hole, Sarazen took a ghastly duffer's seven, and lost the tournament.

But Baffling Brook will be remembered otherwise, as well. That was the hole where Bobby Cruikshank, still a title contender at that point, topped his ball which landed in the brook, skipped out again, and landed on the green. In his joy, Cruikshank forgot he had thrown his club in the air to celebrate, and was conked on the head with it when it fell. He was so dazed, he couldn't finish with better than 76, and ended in a triple tie for third.

Del Miller Boosts Rosecroft Lead With Double Win

Del Miller, 35-year-old contract driver for the Tanglewood farm stable of cigarette king William N. Reynolds, boosted his lead as the leading driver of the Rosecroft raceway meet by driving both ends of the daily double last night in his only appearances.

Miller had 11 wins, 3 seconds and 1 show in 24 starts before last night but drove May Lybrook and Nora Volo to victory in the first two races to climb still higher.

Gene Mako Upset In Pro Tennis; Parker Advances

Cleveland, June 7 (AP).—Jack March of Cleveland Country Club, ranked sixteenth, today staged the first upset in National Professional tennis tournament play when he trimmed Gene Mako of Los Angeles, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3.

Frankie Parker of Milwaukee, won singles and doubles matches during the afternoon. He defeated John Faunce of Burbank, Calif., 6—2, 6—3, and teamed with Pancho Segura of Ecuador to beat Johnny Hendrix of Cleveland and Lloyd Budge of Kirtland, Ohio.

two outs in the fourth that was laden with two runs for the Indians. It scored Boudreau who had tripled to right center and languished on third for two outs. Wynn slid into third and then scrambled home when Dente's relay got away from Yost for an error.

The Nats didn't get their second hit of the night off Wynn until the fifth, and then it was mixed up in two runs that tied the score at 3-3. Evans led off with a walk, and Hudson singled past Boudreau. Yost bunted and the bases were filled with none out when Rosen bobbled the ball.

Two fly balls produced the runs. Stewart flied deep to Doby scoring Evans and moving Hudson to third, and Michaels scored Hudson with a modest fly to Doby.

Rosen smashed a long double off the left field wall to start the eighth and Boudreau promptly scored him with a smartly placed poke to right for a single that moved the Indians in front, 4-3. That was the lead Wynn blew in the Nats' half of the inning when Ostrowski liked what he saw and hit it into the seats.

IN SHORT . . . Bob Lemon, the Indians' top pitcher (6-3) will face his ex-teammate, Bob Kuzava, in tonight's game . . . Lemon shut the Nats out with three hits in Cleveland the last time he faced 'em . . . Bucky Harris is the subject of a featured article in the current edition of Time Magazine which labels him the "holler guy." . . . Ed Stewart caught nothing except a bump on his head and right elbow when he drifted back to the fence for Lou Boudreau's second-inning double . . . When Hudson walked Larry Doby intentionally in the first inning, it was rather discreet. Doby, who authored Griffith Stadium's two longest home runs in recent years, hit them both off Hudson . . . Early Wynn was pouring the ball in the early innings with more speed than he has shown in years . . . Irv Noren is more sure-footed around first base than he was last week when he first got the job.

Ostrowski was robbed of a hit by Easter in the fourth when the 6-foot first baseman leaped high and speared a line drive to his own amazement . . . Easter finally tracked the ball down—in his own glove.

Cards Routed; Musial Hurt

St. Louis, June 7 (AP).—The Boston Braves took full advantage of the crippled St. Louis Cardinals to hand the Redbirds a 10 to 2 defeat tonight. Warren Spahn gave the Cards eight scattered hits and struck out 10 in the game which saw Stan Musial added to the St. Louis injury list.

Musial was cut between two fingers of his left (throwing) hand in the fifth when he took a throw from Al Brazle. One stitch was taken. He will be out a day or two, the club trainer announced.

Over Tough Merion, Pa., Course

Snead Favorite as Open Starts Today

BEN BELTS ONE—Bantam Ben Hogan, who won the National Celebrities Championship in Washington over the weekend, belts a practice drive in his final tuneup for the U. S. Open which starts today at Merion, near Philadelphia. On the left is Washington's Lew Worsham, 1947 Open winner, while Jimmy Demaret is behind Hogan. Hogan had a 71, one over par

Ben Hogan, Demaret Are Next Choices

By Gayle Talbot

Ardmore, Pa., June 7 (AP).—The Merion Golf Club, with the yawning traps that make it one of the toughest layouts in the known world, was fit and ready tonight for tomorrow's struggle against 165 of the Nation's finest shot makers.

Thousands of dollars have been bet that the course will be crowned the victor when the last ball has been played out of its "cabbage" rough late Saturday afternoon and the fiftieth U. S. Open championship is ready for the history books.

There was so much talk, in fact, about the layout's skating rink greens and its so-called "death" holes that comparatively little effort was expended on trying to pick the man who will come closest to conquering its myriad hazards.

Sammy Snead probably remained the favorite to add the Open crown to his many other links laurels, though with the explicit stipulation that he drives long and straight from beginning to end, doesn't start worrying about the rough and tighten up a trifle on his shots.

Jimmy Demaret appeared to be the second choice. The clothes horse from Ojai, Calif., says he loves Merion and that it is made for his game.

Cary Middlecoff seems to have little backing, probably because the odds are terrific against any man outstripping an Open field twice in succession.

Ben Hogan? Nobody quite knows what little poker face's chances are—not even Ben himself. He hasn't played 36 holes in one day since he came out of that car accident over a year ago, and he isn't certain his scarred legs will stand up to Saturday's climatic test.

Said Gene Sarazen, the two-time former champion who lost the 1934 Open at Merion by taking a seven on the eleventh hole of his final round.

"If they were going to play it without walking—just hitting the shots—I would pick Ben without a moment's hesitation. But, unfortunately, he will have to walk."

Gene, incidentally, is among those who have bet substantially that nobody beats par 280. He can't forget that Olin Dutra won the '34 event with 293 strokes, and he can't bring himself to believe that golf has improved 13 shots in 16 years.

Bolt Fires Ace In Open Tuneup

Ardmore, Pa., June 7 (AP).—Tommy Bolt of Durham, N. C., sank a hole-in-one today in practicing for the National Open golf tournament. Bolt dropped his tee shot on the 133-yard thirteenth hole, using a seven iron.

While most of the "name" pros were having difficulty solving the well-trapped layout, Doug Ford of Briarcliff, N. Y., registered a 35, 32—67, 3 under par for the best score of the week. Sam Snead, the pre-tourney favorite, had a 71.

Newcombe Wins 5th

Morgan Homers Twice, Bums Top Bucs, 9-0

Pittsburgh, June 7 (AP).—Shortstop Bobby Morgan drove in four runs with two homers tonight to lead the National League's front-running Brooklyn Dodgers to a 9-0 shutout over the Pittsburgh Pirates. A crowd of 30,904 saw Big Don Newcombe cop his fifth win against two defeats.

The loss was the fifth consecutive setback for the seventh-place Bucs who now have dropped 14 of their last 15.

Rookie Bill MacDonald, the only Pirate pitcher to win a game since May 23, was knocked out of the box

Miller Blanks Reds for Phils

Cincinnati, June 7 (AP).—Phils' Rookie Bob Miller, up from Terre Haute of the Three-Eye League, chalked up his fourth straight victory here tonight as he beat Cincinnati's Reds, 4 to 0. Miller allowed only seven well scattered hits.

Miller, one of the Phils' red hot young pitchers, helped his own game along with his bat. He singled home two runs in the fifth after a single by Granny Hamner and a walk to Andy Seminick had helped set the stage. A fly and a wild pitch had them perched in scoring position when Miller rapped one through the box.

Before the game, the Reds announced they have traded Outfielder Ron Northey to the Chicago Cubs for Catcher Bob Scheffing.

—'In Gym, Ring or Alley,' Rocky Says— LaMotta, Graziano Talk Big About Kayoing Sugar Ray

New York, June 7 (AP).—Middleweight Champion Jake LaMotta and Challenger Rocky Graziano both said today they would like to fight Sugar Ray Robinson and both declared they could knock out the welterweight king.

LaMotta and Graziano will meet in a 15-round title bout in the Polo Grounds June 28. Robinson soundly thrashed Robert Villemain in Philadelphia Monday night for the Pennsylvania middleweight title version.

LaMotta, who won only one out of five bouts with Robinson in the early forties, said "I'd like to fight him again, but in a 20-round bout. I'd knock him out for sure.

"I floored him three times in our other fights and he never dropped me," said LaMotta at his Kaimesha Lake training camp, "every one of those fights were close. And there were no championships involved in them. With my title up—if I win from Rocky—it would be another story."

Graziano, who is working out at Greenwood Lake, said "I'll knock Robinson stiff. I'll take that cocky guy anytime, in a gym, ring or an alley. I want to fight him more than any other guy. I'll take him on after LaMotta, win, lose or draw."

Bosox Romp, 20-4; Vollmer Homers Twice

Boston, June 7 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox scattered 23 hits over and out of Fenway Park today in running up their largest score of the season, a 20-4 victory over the oft-beaten St. Louis Browns.

Among their hits, good for a total of 42 bases, were five home runs. Vern Stephens and Clyde Vollmer, the latter playing center field in place of Dom DiMaggio who is resting a pulled muscle, each walloped a pair of four-baggers and the fifth was driven out by Walt Dropo.

Roy Sievers and Leo Thomas each hit homers for the losing Brownies who now have lost all five games played against Boston.

3 Home Runs Plus Berra's Single in 7th Halt Tigers

New York, June 7 (AP).—The New York Yankees, powered by home runs by Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto, and Billy Johnson, surged back into first place in the American League today by defeating the Detroit Tigers 5-4, ending a seven game Tiger winning streak.

The home runs all came with the bases empty as did one hit by the Tigers' Aaron Robinson. It was Hal Newhouser's second defeat of the season after four straight victories, and, although hit hard at the start, Vic Raschi pitched all the way for the Yankees to win his sixth game.

The home runs provided drama for the ladies day crowd of 37,734, but it was a sharp grounder by Yogi Berra that delivered the winning run. This came in the seventh with the score tied at four all and the bases loaded with two out. Berra hit hard to Johnny Lipon at short who couldn't handle the ball. Cliff Mapes, who singled to open the inning, sped home.

The defeat dropped Detroit back into second place after a one-day hold on the lead. The game also ought an end to the 19-game hitting streak of Lipon.

DEAR FOLKS:

AT DELAWARE

Your Host will return to the races Saturday in the $25,000 added Kent Handicap and he appears to be headed for favoritism in the mile and a sixteenth test. Apparently the William Goetz 3-year-old is ready. According to the way they were bet, the field in the fourth race finished in reverse. The longest shot, Miss Jersey, won at $88.20 and I Will, the favorite, was last. Steeplechase horses are being shipped in with the timbertopping sport, the first in this section this year, beginning with Monday's program. Here's one way to get even: Trainer Joe Mergler, who handles the Heighe stable, won a G-E refrigerator as a Wilmington movie door prize. Trusting Heart, a highly regarded 2-year-old, died of pneumonia this morning. See you on the rail—BILL.

Bank Account 3d as Victor Pays $11.90

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, Del., June 7.—On a red hot racing day, a filly named Merry Xmas wasn't much of a hunch. However, she proved a fast article and ran away with the $10,000 added Polly Drummond stakes, annual test here for 2-year-old fillies.

Making her fourth start of the season, the daughter of Roman and Yuletide made it two straight visits to the winner's circle, this time by five open lengths. In a photo for second, Bobanet Stable's Brazen Brat headed Edward M. O'Brien's Bank Account, the latter the favorite in a field of nine.

The victory was the first for Mrs. Esther duPont Weir in the ten years of the Polly Drummond, an eagerly sought juvenile fixture. Those who saw Merry Xmas win her previous race with the greatest of ease came back to her today and were rewarded with an $11.90 win mutuel.

Betting approached $800,000 with a crowd of 9000 on hand for a program that saw the public choices, for the most part, taking a licking.

The Mont Chanin Handicap, the day's secondary feature, proved a wakeup affair.

For Mrs. James McGee's Wide Margin, four times a beaten favorite this year, the son of Heliopolis turned in his third victory, winning by three parts of a length from Leon Santore's King Chico. Third money went to Mrs. William W. Vaughan's Eddieow in the field of 13.

Gehrdes Enters National AAU Track Meet Here

The United States AAU track and field championships, to be held June 23-24 at University of Maryland, yesterday received an entry from its first "big name" performer—Jim Gehrdes of Penn State.

Gehrdes, indoor AAU hurdles champion, who has finished second or first in every meet he's entered for two years, will compete in the 100 meters dash, and the 110 and 200 meter hurdles.

All track events will be measured off by meters instead of yards. Winners and second place finishers will qualify for the United States team which will enter the Pan American games in Buenos Aires next January. The top men will also travel to Europe and South Africa to represent the United States this summer.

Marines Wallop VFW, 24 to 1

The Marine Corps Institute scored 15 runs in the fourth inning and romped to a 24-1 victory over the Veterans of Foreign Wars in a Recreation League game yesterday at Fairlawn.

Chick Barth led the Marine attack with three hits in four trips, including two home runs. He batted in six runs.

W. & L. Goalie Bill Clements Makes Lacrosse All-America

Bill Clements of Washington and Lee University yesterday was named to the All-America lacrosse team by the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

Clements' selection was made ahead of all the others so that he could be presented the C. Markland Kelly Trophy Friday night between halves of the North-South All Star lacrosse game at University of Maryland.

The trophy is given annually to the All-America goalie by the president of the Baltimore City Council in memory of his son who was killed in the last war. By coincidence, Clements is a Baltimorean.

The South team has its 1949 defensive alignment of Clements, Navy's Phil Ryan, Virginia's Bobby Prout and Johns Hopkins' Lloyd Bunting. The North has two All-Americas, Midfielder Bill Foller of Syracuse and Attackman Dick Powell of Rennselaer Poly.

The two 22-man squads have been holding morning and afternoon drills at Byrd Stadium for the past two days.

Landon Wins 9 Out of 10, Behind Banfield, Long

Landon has completed one of the most successful baseball seasons in the school's history by winning 9 out of 10 games.

The Bethesda school lost only to St. Andrew's of Middleton, Del., Interstante Academic Conference champion, while winning over Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Priory (twice), St. Albans, St. Jame's Gilman of Baltimore, Sidwell Friends, Honeywell and Woodward.

The team was coached by Tom Blount, former Navy football and baseball star in the early 1940's. Outstanding player on the team was All-Prep Star Lanny Banfield, team captain and second baseman. Banfield hit over .350 and led the team in runs batted in. Allen Long was the best pitcher with a 5-0 mark.

NCAA Discovers 6 More 'Sanity' Code Violators

Cleveland, June 7 (AP).—Six more colleges have been discovered violating the "sanity code" of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the group's complaint committee announced today. It refused to name the schools.

The complaint committee of the NCAA has just ended a three-day meeting in which 20 schools believed to be going beyond the code were scrutinized.

Clarence P. Houston of Tufts College committee chairman, said that besides the six, seven others were found complying with the code and seven still are pending.

The six in violation will be considered at the NCAA's meeting in Chicago in August, he said.

Touchdowners Frolic Today At Manor Club

Several hundred members of the Touchdown Club will risk an active day outdoors today at Manor Country Club, site of its seventh annual outing.

Mike Janowski, Prince Georges Country Club ace, will be one of the big favorites in the golf tourney expected to draw a field of 100.

Janowski, recent winner of hte Kenwood Invitational, tied Henry Broadbent for top honors last year, but lost the toss.

Aching muscles are bound to result from the softball game between lettermen and non-lettermen. The business team of Tommy Whelan and Ben Zola will split for the day with Tommy captaining the lettermen.

Some of the real Monday morning quarterbacks will take the less strenous way out, entering the horseshoe pitching. The diehards retaliate by participating in track events.

Maryland Park Girls Win Softball Title

Maryland Park defeated Greenbelt, 14-10, to clinch the Prince Georges County Girls' Softball League championship yesterday at Greenbelt. The victors finished their season with 10 victories and one loss.

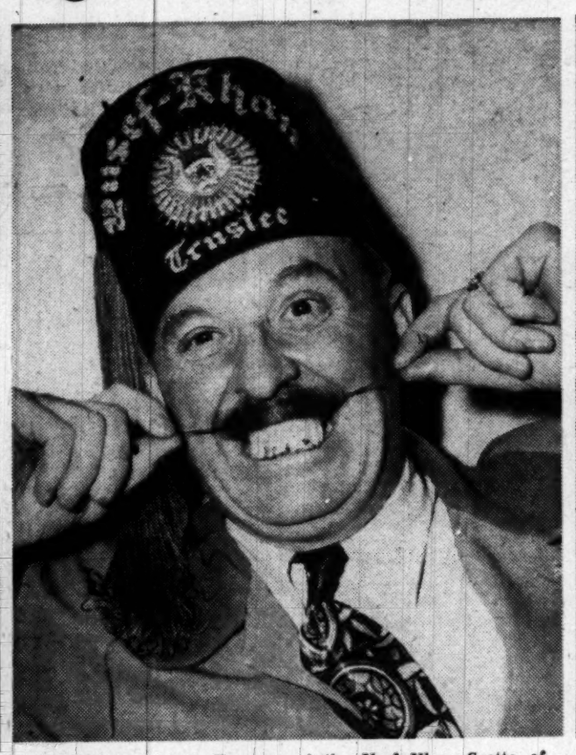
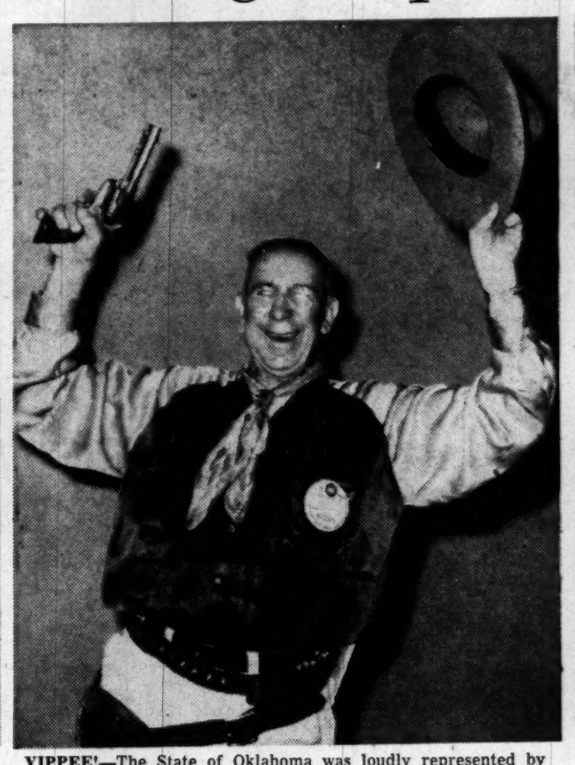
Good Fellowship Reigns as 12,000 Fun-Loving 'Prophets' Open Convention

MEMENTO—Robert J. De Mitchell and Elgin S. Wilson of the Zal Gaz Grotto of Ann Arbor, Mich., arrive at opening of Grotto convention at Statler Hotel carrying a banner of convention held here in June, 1917



CHOPPERS—Paul L. Emmons of the Usef Khan Grotto of Akron, Ohio, showed up wearing a fancy set of false teeth but wanted to prove that the mustache was his very own. Emmons said that he would don gay nineties attire



YIPPEE!—The State of Oklahoma was loudly represented by Charles R. Bopp of Bartlesville who made his appearance bedecked in cowboy regalia and waving an old 45 cal. Colt revolver. He claims it once belonged to Badman Emmett Dalton

SPECTATORS—Watching the proceedings as the hotel lobby filled were 9-year-old twin sisters, Clair and Ann, who came to the convention with their father, Stanley Peterman of the El Jaala Grotto, Chicago. They had plenty of laughs

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

A compromise hot weather policy for Federal workers is slated to be approved today by the Federal Personnel Council.

The first proposal that employes be charged with either annual or sick leave when their offices are closed because of excessive heat was coldly received. Also, the present policy is generally regarded as "too liberal."

So a committee is trying to draft a policy in-between the two extremes. A system along these lines is probable: that a combination of temperature and humidity must reach a certain point in each office before the employes in them can be excused for the day, and that any employes who are unable to work before the release points are reached be charged with leave.

The temperature-humidity release points probably will be moved up several degrees each. The minimum temperature release point last summer was 90. A new minimum of 92 has been suggested.

JUSTICE: Another able career civil servant has been moved up into the "Little Cabinet." He's S. A. Andretta, who has been appointed administrative Assistant Attorney General, a new job created under the Justice reorganization plan. His job corresponds to the positions of Assistant Secretary for Administration that have been set up in several other departments.

Also at Justice, Abraham Harris has been appointed Assistant Attorney General in charge of the office of legal opinions. He was formerly assistant solicitor general.

BOND BILL: The House Expenditures Committee yesterday voted to relieve about 1,200,000 Federal workers of paying annual premiums on the surety bonds they are required to carry.

It okayed a bill by Representative Frank Karsten (D., Mo.) to have the Government buy and pay for the bonds in bulk lots. The estimated cost to the employes of two million dollars would be cut down to about $500,000 annually under the Government purchase plan.

The bill would save valuable time of Federal officials who must check up on individual employes to make sure they carry surety bonds.

STATE: It has set up a committee to pass on the necessity of the jobs before any vacancies can be filled. With a "freeze" on, the committee has approved the filling of only a minor number of vacancies.

2 Policemen Face Charges In Theft

Pvts. Henry J. (Bull) Martin and Warren G. Farran were faced with grand larceny charges and police disciplinary action last night as a result of the alleged theft of two air-conditioning units while they were on duty.

In Municipal Court yesterday their hearings on charges of grand larceny were continued until June 15. Bond was continued at $1000 each, the figure set when they were arrested Tuesday night.

By nightfall, Police Inspector John Fondahl as chief clerk of the department was drawing up specifications for trial board action against the two already suspended officers.

Farran, 30, and a policeman for four years, was apprehended by Police Lieut. August R. Helwig in a 2-mile chase through Eighth Precinct streets about 10 p. m. Tuesday.

Has 26 Years of Service

Martin, 50, and a veteran of 26 years on the force, was called into the precinct to be suspended and charged a short time after Helwig stripped Farran of his revolver and badge.

Helwig, night inspector—"the nighthawk"—of the Metropolitan force, said he found two air-conditioners in cartons in the back of Farran's car.

Helwig said he was concealed near an apartment house project at 4201 Massachusetts ave. nw., Tuesday night and saw Martin and Farran leave the site—Farran in his private car and Martin in a scout car.

Helwig said he was on the scene because about 7 p. m. Tuesday he received a complaint from Sherman Callaway, a watchman at the construction site, who told him that two policemen had been inquiring about the conditioners Monday and that they had returned Tuesday afternoon.

Traffic deaths to date 29
Deaths this time last year 30
Total traffic deaths 1949 71

Two traffic deaths were reported yesterday by area police. A Silver Spring man was fatally injured when he was thrown several feet into the air after losing control of his motorcycle, while a District man died of traffic injuries suffered March 26 in a two-car collision.

The victims were James W. Telfair, 49, garage attendant at 2418 17th st. nw. and Joseph H. Fields, 68, of 1609 6th st. nw.

Telfair, employe of the Capital Motor Co., was thrown from a motorcycle on the East-West highway at Brookville rd. in Chevy Chase, Md., at 3:45 p. m., after losing control.

Witnesses said Telfair slumped over the controls before the cycle careened. One witness estimated Telfair was hurled 6 feet in the air.

After losing its driver, the cycle sideswiped a truck driven by Carl A. Souther, 46, of 9403 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, then careened into a ditch.

After performing an autopsy Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County Medical Examiner, issued a certificate of death due to a ruptured heart caused by the accident.

Fields died at 2:30 a. m. in Freemen's Hospital. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said an autopsy indicated Fields' spinal cord had snapped.

Fields had been injured when a car he was driving at 11:40 a. m. on March 26 collided with a car driven by Wade T. Cunningham, 23, of 101 I st. nw. at 6th and P sts. nw.

Cunningham was arraigned yesterday on a charge of manslaughter, released under $2000 bond and the case continued for two weeks.

Mrs. Florence Brittle, 21, of 2701 S. Wayne st., Arlington, was in fair condition at Arlington Hospital yesterday, after her car collided with a train at the Shirley hwy. crossing earlier in the day.

Mrs. Brittle was going south on Shirley hwy., on her way to work as a civilian employe at Fort Belvoir, when she struck a Washington & Old Dominion train at 7:50 a. m. police said.

Alexandria Grows 84% In 10 Years

The City of Alexandria had an 84 percent population increase during the past ten years, preliminary 1950 census figures showed yesterday.

Figures were released by Archie E. Miller, Alexandria district supervisor for the Census Bureau.

The preliminary 1950 population total for Alexandria was set at 61,601, compared with 33,523 for 1940. The increase is 28,078.

The latest total is a far cry from the first Alexandria census figures taken in 1790, when population stood at 2748.

Some reasons for the tremendous recent population influx into Alexandria were given yesterday by former City Mayor W. T. Wilkins. The city, he noted, had shared in the tremendous wartime expansion of Washington, serving, along with other Northern Virginia communities, as a sort of "bedroom" for Washington.

The construction of a number of large apartment developments since 1940 (including Arlandria and Parkfairfax) provided the "bedrooms."

New population was coaxed into the city area over fine access roads, within 15-minute commuting distance to Washington. And Wilkins added that the privilege of voting probably had attracted other new residents to the entire Northern Virginia area.

Since 1790, Alexandria's steady population growth is reflected in Census Bureau figures such as these: 1800, 4971; 1810, 7227; 1820, 8218; 1830, 8241; 1840, 8459; 1850, 8734; 1860, 12,652; 1870, 13,570; 1880, 13,659; 1890, 14,339; 1900, 14,528; 1910, 15,329; 1920, 18,060; 1930, 24,149; 1940, 33,523, and the new preliminary figure for 1950, 61,601.

Absentee Voters Organize

The Republican Absentee Voters Club of Oregon was organized last night at the home of Mrs. Charles L. McNary, 1600 32d st. nw., widow of the former Oregon Senator.

Corning Would Scrap Teacher Pay 'Hurdles'

School Superintnedent Hobart M. Corning yesterday proposed a change in the Teachers Salary Act to eliminate the "hurdles" about which teachers have complained since the act was passed in 1947.

The proposal would do away with the requirement that teachers prove professional growth and attainment at 5 and 10-year intervals in order to get salary increases.

Dr. Corning submitted his plan to the Board of Education for study. If approved, the board will ask Congress to amend the act.

The superintendent said he had found the 5 and 10-year reviews "unnecessary, disturbing to professional morale, and almost impossible to administer."

Experience indicates that teachers and school officials are highly professional people "eager for self improvement," Dr. Corning said.

He reminded the board that the best teaching is done "by personnel professionally secure."

"The so-called 'hurdles' requirement tends to create uncertainty in the minds of teachers, places emphasis upon participation in in-service activities solely for the purpose of meeting standards that are related to salary position rather than service in the classroom," he said.

The board approved four other changes in the salary act, and sent them to the District Commissioners

Recommended were salary provisions for consultants and supervisors, removal of master degree requirements for vocational shop teachers and librarians, providing they show equivalent training; a position of chief examiner for the Negro schools, and extension of the probationary period of teachers from one to two years.

In other actions the board:

Repeated its opposition to provisions of home rule proposals that would give salaries to school board members. The board said it preferred to serve on a voluntary basis.

Authorized Dr. Corning and Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, chairman of the legislative committee, to visit the House Labor and Education Committee to urge that the District be included in any plan of Federal aid to education.

Retired two principals and 10 teachers with long records of service to the city.

'Too Serious'

Boss Prophet Talks About Need of Fun

As Grand Monarch Frank B. Jones said:

"People take themselves too seriously."

And he added (and right here we'll editorialize and say we agree with him wholeheartedly on this): "You've got to have some fun. You just can't go to work every day and then go home and never think about anything but your business."

This is the philosophy of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm, which with 12,000 delegates on board is currently having one of Washington's biggest conventions.

"If people would just forget their troubles and their sores for a while and come out and meet their brother," commented Jones, relaxing at the Statler. "Everyday and everyday . . . well . . ." he pointed out the fifth floor window . . . "This isn't too low to jump out. Too many people, too many . . ."

While being great for fun the Prophets, we are happy to say, draw a strong line at that deranged school which might be called the squirt-gun outfit.

"We don't allow any of this funny stuff on the streets," said Jones. "We don't allow our members to molest people, squirt-guns, firecrackers, that sort of thing."

Fate of a prophet guilty on this score can be suspension from the Mystic Order.

Jones, an affable 62-year-old Welshman, is chief sealer of weights and measures in Youngstown, Ohio, and former vice-mayor of that city. A Grand Monarch is too busy himself to have much fun, he has found, in the last year in office, visiting chapters all over.

It takes 12 years to get to be C and Monarch, Jones said. His first office was Grand Venerable Prophet. Next Grand Monarch, to be elected Friday, will be present Deputy Grand Monarch Robert J. Espie of Toronto, Canada, Jones explained.

The organization, Jones said, started one 1890 night in Hamilton, N. Y., when a group of Masons got together after a lodge meeting and decided they needed something to "take their minds off their work."

Since then it has grown to 221 grottoes.

Fezzed Prophets Invade Washington

Washington's streets and hotel lobbies gleamed with fezzed prophets yesterday as the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm moved on the city, 12,000 strong.

The Masonic purveyors of two philosophies—fun and helping the handicapped—will stage a parade down Constitution ave. from 3d to 17th st. beginning at 1:30 p. m. today.

A Sesquicentennial festival is on tab for 8:30 p. m. at the Jefferson Memorial, at the Tidal Basin, with bands, choral groups and Susan Reed, ballad singer, performing.

From 46 States, Canada

From 46 States and Canada the Prophets jammed into town yesterday to open their four-day convention.

Registration throughout the day at the Statler and Mayflower was followed last night by the Grand Monarch's banquet and ball, with much entertainment and Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) as speaker.

Grand Monarch Frank B. Jones laid wreaths yesterday at three historic sites: Washington's Tomb at Mount Vernon, Washington's statue at the George Washington National Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington.

Prophets' Objectives

The Prophets are devoted to having fun and to helping those afflicted with cerebral palsy. The latter activity is pursued through the financing of clinics and hospitals.

In the Statler's lobbies the Prophets went to work, promptly on arrival, to show how they further the fun cause.

Zelica Grotto of Pensacola, Fla., set up a table in the main-floor lobby with a sign "One-Day Florida Divorces Issued Here."

A delegate could step up and procure "A Decree of Divorcement," declaring him "to be a single bachelor and of completely unattached state with neither wife, nor kith, nor kin, worries, problems, obligations or troubles."

This document, it should be added, was specifically labeled as being good only for the duration of the convention, which runs through Saturday.

A rugged-looking Oklahoman, name of Charles R. Bopp, a petroleum engineer from Bartlesville, strode through the Statler lobby wearing 10-gallon hat, cowboy boots, flaming shirt and swinging at his hip a .45 Colt he said once belonged to Emmett Dalton of the famed Dalton brothers outlaws.

The Statler lobbies echoed with such cries as: "Is there anyone here from Terre Haute?"

Paul L. Emmons, Akron, Ohio, a retired policeman, scurried about with an oversized set of false teeth jumping with no warning from his mouth.

And Dewey, Too.

Just to keep this nonpolitical Thomas E. Dewey (the Governor of New York and twice Republican presidential candidate, that is) is an active member of the Kaa-Rheu-Vahn Grottoes of New York.

To indicate the scale on which the grottoes do things: Fifteen bus loads of delegates, escorted by Pennsylvania police, were due to arrive from Islam Grotto, Pittsburgh, and put up at the Mayflower.

Elaborate ceremonies, with flag-bearing, band-playing and the like, will open the Supreme Council Session at 9:30 a. m. today at the Statler.

Ceremonial at Statler

Following the parade, a ceremonial will be held by the Sahara Grotto of Indianapolis at 4:30 p. m. in the Statler's Presidential Room.

A stunt-man contest is set for 6 p. m. at the Statler. At 8 p. m. pregame ceremonies will be held at Griffith Stadium at the Washington-Cleveland baseball game and Lou Boudreau, Cleveland manager, will be presented with a trophy.

Friday will be another combination day of business and pleasure, with election of officers in the morning at the Statler, and a cruise down the Potomac in the afternoon. Officers will be installed at the final session, 9:30 a. m. Saturday at the Statler.

Miss Dubin Gets Webb Scholarship

Elizabeth Dubin, 17-year-old senior at Coolidge High School, received on Tuesday the Ruth Webb Memorial Scholarship to Wilson Teachers College.

Miss Dubin

The award of $100 was presented by Associate Schools Superintendent Carl F. Hansen in ceremonies at the Franklin Administration bldg. Miss Dubin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dubin, 6412 9th st. nw., was selected from a group of students nominated by each of the high schools. She will prepare for elementary school teaching when she enters Wilson in the fall.

Miss Nancy Patterson, 2109 F st. nw., for the third successive year, received the $50 Kramer Award Scholarship from Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning. She will enter her junior year at Wilson in September.

The Webb scholarship is a memorial to the late Mrs. Webb, director of the first division of the elementary schools. The Kramer scholarship is given in memory of Stephen E. Kramer, for many years assistant superintendent of schools.

Donald D. Davis, 61, Dies; Former WPB Official

Minneapolis, June 7 (AP).—Donald D. Davis, 61, nationally known financial industrial executive and president of Minnesota and Ontario Paper Co., died today at a hospital.

Davis suffered a stroke Tuesday night at his home.

In 1942, he became vice chairman of the War Production Board in Washington for two years.

During World War I, Davis was executive secretary of the milling division of the United States food administration, working with Herbert Hoover.

Two years ago Davis served on the Hoover Commission on Government reorganization as a member of a subcommittee on Federal lending.

A class of 1411 students, the largest in the history of Catholic University, was graduated yesterday in colorful ceremonies in the gymnasium.

Wearing the red robes of his office, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Washington and chancellor of the university, conferred the degrees and presented diplomas to 63 newly designated academic doctors.

The archbishop walked with the graduates in the long procession across the campus to the gymnasium to open the ceremony. He conferred the degrees from a stage banked with the flags of all nations.

The capped and gowned graduates about filled the main floor of the gymnasium, crowding parents and friends into the balcony and along the sides of the wall.

The graduates let out a mighty shout at the conclusion of a 40-minute commencement address by Dr. Ross Hoffman, Fordham history professor, which ended the program and their days at the university.

The honorary degree of doctor of science was conferred on William Humphrey Doherty, director of electronic and television research for the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Visitation Convent

At 11 a. m., the reparatory school graduated 47 students. Principal speaker wts Representative John A. Carroll (D., Colo.), father of one of the graduates, Diana Ruth Carroll. The Rev. Girard F. Yates, S. J., dean of Georgetown University's Graduate School,, presided.

A class of 60 was graduated by the junior college at 4 p. m. The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, presided. Principal speaker was Shane MacCarthy, chairman of the current affairs committee of the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus.

Sidwell Friends

Sidwell Friends School graduated its record class of 52 students at exercises last night in the garden of Grayson House, 3825 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Sir Oliver S. Franks, British Ambassador, gave the commencement address. His elder daughter, Caroline, is a pupil in the middle school.

"Don't be afraid of life," Sir Oliver said. "The secret of happiness lies in the resolute efforts of mankind to overcome environment and not be subdued by it. That is the tradition that has made America great."

Albert W. Atwood, trustee, introduced the Ambassador. James Austin Stone, chairman of the board, presented the diplomas.

Wavell Given Hero's Rites in Westminster

London, June 7 (AP).—Britain gave Field Marshal Lord Wavell a hero's funeral today in historic Westminster Abbey.

The body of the veteran of Palestine, Somaliland, Crete, Tobruk, and Burma was brought to Westminster by boat from London Tower, where it had been lying in state since his death on May 26.

Representatives of the royal family mingled with high military officials of many countries as the funeral procession moved up the Thames. Wavell was the first great British commander since Lord Nelson to be carried to his funeral by water.

Soldiers from the Black Watch Regiment of which he was colonel guarded Wavell's body and escorted it through the service. Some of the troops had been flown home from Germany for the occasion.

Following the service, Lord Wavell's body was to be buried privately in Winchester.

Lanman Rites Slated Today; Was FBI Agent

Charles Frederic Lanman, 48, FBI agent who was a key witness in the trial of eight Nazi saboteurs captured in this country early in World War II, died of a stroke Tuesday at Arlington Hospital. Only recently he was reported in excellent health after an FBI physicial exam.

Mr. Lanman

Associates yesterday described the special agent as "one of the FBI's top men." He is credited with helping to crack several espionage and security cases in this country.

Mr. Lanman had lived the past two and a half years with his wife, Edith May, and son, C. Frederic, at 4477 South Mile Run Drive, Arlington, Va. On Monday he took his wife to Georgetown University Hospital for special treatment.

FBI agents recalled yesterday that Mr. Lanman was "instrumental" in the capture of the eight Nazis arrested by the FBI in June, 1942. Four were landed by German submarine on Amagansett Beach, Long Island, on June 13 and four were landed four days later off Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla. After military trials here, six went to the electric chair and two were returned to Germany in 1948 after serving prison terms.

Mr. Lanman also had a part in the investigation of a New York espionage ring prior to Pearl Harbor and an Atlantic City vice case in 1937.

Born in Brentwood, Md., he attended Brentwood Commercial School, the YMCA night school and received his law degree in 1934 from National University Law School.

Mr. Lanman joined the FBI shortly after becoming a lawyer and had served as a special agent ever since, alternating his service between the New York and Washington offices.

Besides his wife and son, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Randolph K. Wheat of 1629 Columbia rd. nw.

Services will be held at 1 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Lieut. D. J. Crawford, jr. Buried in Arlington

Military services and burial were held yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery for Lieut. David J. Crawford, jr., 24, who was killed Friday in a fighter plane crash at Wright Field, Ohio.

Lieut. Crawford was a 1945 graduate of West Point. He was the son of Col. and Mrs. David J. Crawford. Col. Crawford, commander of the Detroit Tank Arsenal, had been stationed in the Washington area.

Surviving besides his parents are his wife, Mrs. Marjorie P. Crawford of Jersey City, N. J.; a son, Vincent P. Crawford, and a brother, Charles C. Crawford.

D. C. Dress Takes Top Sewing Honors In New York Show

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 7.—It took Washington's own contribution—a fragile, chartreuse cotton dance frock—to stop the fashion show here tonight in the celebrity-packed Sert Room at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

While hundreds of guests looked on, the winning garments in the tenth annual National Sewing Contest were paraded on the runway by glamorous, long-stemmed American beauties. And the Washington dress, designed and made by Mrs. Thomas L. Good, took top billing over all the rest. It climaxed the show, in which the eight national winners, and 39 other garments of outstanding merit from 29 cities, were modeled.

Then it went a step further. It was "best in show" in a contest judged by audience applause . To diminutive, talented Mrs. Good went the Clark Gold Cup, awarded for the first time this year, for the garment selected by the audience as the outstanding entry in the national finals. Some seamstress, our Mrs. Good!

Smiling, and ever so pleased with her unexpected success, Mrs. Good received the applause of the crowd from a table where she sat surrounded by her husband, three daughters, and a few close friends.

Although she has designed and sewn clothes all her life, this has been her first experience at entering, to say nothing of winning, a sewing contest. She took top honors in the glamor group division of the preliminary contest, sponsored by The Washington Post. Then she proceeded to walk off with the national prize which was formally awarded her here tonight.

Celebration Double For This Winner

SINCE Sunday Mrs. Good, along with the other seven national prize winners in the various divisions of the contest, has been here to participate in the round of activities planned in their honor. Hosts have been officials of the National Needlecraft Bureau, sponsors of the Nation-wide competition.

The week had a double significance for the talented little designer, since Monday marked her thirty-sixth wedding anniversary. To celebrate it there was a family dinner at the Stork Club, with Mr. Good, their daughters, Mrs. W. H. Hoover, jr. and the Misses Gertrude and Betty Good in attendance Their gift to their prize-winning mother: a jeweled charm for her bracelet, inside which stands, fittingly enough, a tiny, sparkling dress form.

Leading Designers In the Audience

IN THE throng watching tonight's show were several leading designers, stylists and members of the fashion press. The best compliment an expert can make about a garment was paid Mrs. Good's frock by Designer Emily Wilkins, famed creator of young fashions:

"It's a really good dress," she said, as she took note of its color, design and workmanship. The dress, cut with full, short-length skirt, is of cotton lace over nylon net and underslip of taffeta. The boat-neckline is sprinkled with amber jewels, and a narrow velvet belt is tied at the waistline.

The eight final garments were chosen by a panel of experts from among 360 finalists. Each of the eight winners became eligible for the national competition as a result of winning a first prize in one of the local contests. In the latter, more than 20,000 garments were submitted and 720 first and second prizes were awarded locally.

In the local contest sponsored by The Washington Post, Mrs. Good's design was awarded first prize in the glamour division by a panel of judges including Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Lauris Norstad, wife of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, USAF; Mrs. Lee Rush, head of the Home Economics Department, Public Schools; Miss Faye Mitchell, Professor of Textiles and Clothing, University of Maryland; and Miss Kathryn Towne, Associate Professor of Home Economics, George Washington University.

Winners Come From All Over

THE eight finalists in New York this week, come from such widely separated cities as Portland, Oreg.; Miami, Fla.; Harrisburg, Pa., and Savannah, Ga.

One of the most excited is a 15-year-old girl from Harrisburg, Kathryn Beshore. She won national recognition for her entry in the junior division. It is a handsomely tailored two-piece dress of black and white houndstooth check wool. A high school sophomore, she lists her hobbies as basketball, hockey, tennis—and sewing.

A young woman from Charleston, W. Va., making her third try in the contest, won in the original design division. A kelly green cotton carnival dress, it was judged most interesting for its primitive American Indian feeling.

Miss Martha Ann Minton, young career girl from Miami, took the award in the tailored dress made by standard pattern; Mrs. R. G. House, Wichita, Kas., in the soft, dressy group, with a two-piece white linen.

Darling of the show was a little-girl model, who wore the frilly party dress made by Mrs. T. R. Hudson of Savannah. Blue-eyed and blond, she was so entranced with the frock of pale pink organdy over a matching nylon slip, that she wanted to take it home with her.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Is Stymied In Romance and Friendship, Because She Freezes With Fear When Persons She Likes Show Interest In Each Other; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am suffering from a terrific insecurity complex and I shall give several examples of how it manifests.

1. Last summer I met a nice young man at a dance, while visiting relatives in another city. When he brought me home, my cousin was in the living room with her beau, so I asked him in. Ordinarily I would have said goodnight at the door. Immediately my cousin started talking of herself and her stage and modeling experience (much exaggerated). My friend, an art student, told her she had the attributes for modeling, and I could feel myself freezing up. He then devoted some attention to me but I dismissed him very stiffly and he did not call again, although earlier in the evening he had made plans to take me sightseeing.

2. Recently I've had several dates with Bill, whom I like very much. Then he asked me to a party, for which I carefully chose the right clothes, as I wanted to look my best, knowing other attractive girls would be there. Everything was fine until we were driving home in company of two other couples. One especially attractive girl was talking gaily, mostly about herself, and the more she talked the more stupid I became.

How Overcome Fear of Loss?

I HAD A horrible feeling that my date preferred her to me, although there was no indication, except one question he addressed to her, as to where she went to college. In parting he asked me for a date next day. I had other arrangements so I refused him, but in a quite mean, discouraging way. I am sure insecurity prompted this attitude. I had a premonition I wouldn't see him again, and true enough he hasn't called.

3. I have a new girl friend whom I like very much. I introduced her to another girl friend and we three lunched together. I feared my new friend would become more interested in the other girl than me, and that they would pair off and exclude me. This hasn't happened. They haven't furthered their acquaintanceship and I am friends of both. I didn't voice these feelings, of course.

4. One more example. A girl whom I like a great deal and meet for lunch occasionally, broke a luncheon date with me, on the plea that her work was too heavy to allow time out. She didn't suggest another date, just abruptly ended the conversation. I spent a whole evening thinking about it. She called me again in about a month to make another date. Why do these incidents occur? Why do I feel this way? How can I overcome this anxiety? Please answer soon. S. L.

Was She Rejected or Overprotected?

DEAR S. L.: One would need to study your social history, with special attention to the kind of treatment you got from parents and brothers or sisters (if any) in earliest years, in order to dredge up the reasons why you are panicked by aggressive competition in the hunt for love and friendship.

A sense of rejection could foster this neurotic bias, supposing your parents, particularly the mother, obviously favored another child more; or at any rate seemed critical of, or indifferent to you. But also an exceedingly pampered child, assiduously loved and coddled by a doting mama, may experience similar feelings of dismay in later years, when coping with contemporaries who give no quarter.

The child who is neither rejected nor overly protected by family usually takes good care of himself in the social scramble, and doesn't lose heart when the cards go against him occasionally.

Your type of discouragement gets worse the more you surrender to it. Therefore, reverse the trend. The cure consists in simply refusing to "freeze up" when your fears recur. How do this? By acting as if you weren't afraid. For example, suppose you have a date and another girl, very attractive, is being scintillating. Your beau seems interested. What's your cue? Get interested, too. Let her have the spotlight. Act appreciative, approving, friendly,—a generosity the man will note and like, and that will draw him to you rather than her, if she is trying to undercut.

Generous Spirit Dissolves Rivalry

HERE IS a true story, told me by a Plain Jane, that packs a moral for you. Only recently has she begun to overcome excessive timidity about making friends. This timidity in the past caused her to take a corner seat in mixed company. But came the day at a gay party when she was actually sustaining cheerful conversation with two men, one at each elbow. Then the crisis! One of the men interrupted to ask, "Who is that beautiful girl over there?"

Plain Jane, instead of fading into the woodwork as formerly, blithely replied, "I don't know, but let's find out." She led the way to the beauty, introduced herself and said, "May I present two wolves dying to meet you?" Result, a mirthful quartet having a wonderful time, and, says Jane, three friends secured. The men remained her courtiers and the beauty asked her to dinner later.

Boots, Saddle, to Bike and Away! Time for Summer Cyclists to Stray; Youth Hostels Offer a Place to Stay

DEAR ANNE:

Your advice has been invaluable to me in running my home. Now I wonder if you can help me plan my summer vacation? Before the war, there was an organization called the Youth Hostel Association, which maintained inexpensive dormitories for summer cyclists and hikers in most of Europe and in parts of the United States. Can you tell me whether the American branch of the association still functions? Does it still maintain hostels in the New England area? Does one have to be a student to stay in the hostels, if they are still operating?

F. R. D., Arlington, Va.

Yes, indeed, American Youth Hostels, Inc., still functions, with an imposing list of directors headed by John D. Rockefeller 3d. Hostels will be open this summer not only in New England States, but also in our own Potomac area—as well as many other beauty spots of the United States. One needn't be a student to use these overnight facilities, and there's no age limit, but a membership pass is required. Cost of a pass is $3 if you're over 21; $2, if under. Another major requirement is that you must be travelling on your own steam—that is, by bike or hike, not by motor.

You can apply for a pass, and for other hostel rules and information, by writing American Youth Hostels, Inc., 6 East 39th st., New York, N. Y. For a handbook listing all United States hostels, with full directions for reaching them, inclose 50 cents. As you probably know, this is a nonprofit organization.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you have any good suggestions for cleaning white linen pumps? Have used dry cleaning fluid and white polish over the really bad spots, but they still look bad.

Mrs. James W. Haynes, Hyattsville, Md.

The foam type of rug cleaner is often successfully used for this purpose. This is the type that you apply, work to a lather, then scrape off. Follow the explicit directions on the package. It is sold under several different trade names.

DEAR ANNE:

Is there any home method that can be used to remove three or four blood stains from some fabric? It has been cleaned several times but always comes back with the marks still in.

G. N. R., Washington.

Did you tell the cleaner what the stains were when you sent the garment to him? This is very helpful—both to you and the cleaner—in getting spots of a special nature removed. Now that the blood has been pressed in, it will be hard to get out.

However, powdered pepsin will often remove blood stains that have been set. (You can get this at some drug stores. One can be reached by telephoning Republic 7700.) You'll have to dampen the dress to use it. Use lukewarm water then sprinkle on the pepsin powder. Let stand half an hour, keeping the spot damp. Or mix the pepsin powder with water (two teaspoons to one pint) and sponge stain with it. Sponge well with water afterward.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Jobé Says...

The Little Cape Is Ultra Smart

Although the little short full flaring coat is certainly the coat of the summer, the little cape is the newest and smartest of the little wrap fashions.

These may be as short as just-below-the-bust length, or as long as your fingertips can reach. And you can have them in anything from sheer organdy to soft wool.

I think they are smartest about waist length or a little below—in spanking white bird's-eye pique and linen—or in a brilliant color velveteen such as coral or orange or violet.

Brass Gleams at Fete For Army Secretary

By Elizabeth Maguire

A JUNE afternoon and concert music by the Army band made a very pleasant background for the reception held yesterday by the Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins at their home at Fort Lesley J. McNair. The Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., were the guests of honor, and the event provided an opportunity for the new secretary to meet Army commanders who are in Washington for their semi-annual conference.

Mrs. Collins received in a gown of white organdy, and Mrs. Pace wore navy blue chiffon. After going down the line, guests were led into the garden where refreshments were served and the red-coated band played martial airs and music in waltz time. Approximately 800 guests attended the 5:30 reception, and a buffet supper was held later for a small group.

The Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, was the first guest to be received. On the lawn facing the pretty Washington Channel, guests had cooling drinks, while inside in the dining room, tea and coffee were served.

Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad were in the gathering as well as the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet, Gen. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Haislip, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young and Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb.

Assisting Mrs. Collins through the receiving hours were Mrs. Arthur W. Vanaman, Mrs. Charles L. Bolte, Mrs. Alexander R. Bolling, Mrs. Harold R. Bull, Mrs. John E. Hull, Mrs. William H. Arnold, Mrs. Floyd Parks and Mrs. Matthew B. Ridgway.

Guests invited to the supper for the Secretary and Mrs. Pace were Undersecretary of the Army Archibald S. Alexander, Assistant Secretary of the Army Karl R. Bendetsen, Assistant Secretary of the Army Earl D. Johnson, Gen. and Mrs. Wade H. Haislip, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Matthew B. Ridgway, Gen. Mark Clark and his mother, Mrs. Charles C. Clark, Maj. Gen. Roscoe B. Woodruff, Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., Lieut. Gen. LeRoy Lutes, Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlin, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Henry S. Aurand, Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, Lieut. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas W. Herren, and Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing.

Stanley Woodward Takes Home Laurels

STANLEY WOODWARD, newly appointed Ambassador to Canada and former Chief of Protocol, was honor guest at a farewell luncheon yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club, given by a group of his personal friends.

Mr. Woodward took away with him from the fete a certificate of merit presented to him by the Board of District Commissioners, John Russell Young, Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young. The award read "To Stanley Woodward for his outstanding service to the citizens of Washington and to the Government of the District of Columbia in lending his personal talents to planning civic celebrations honoring visiting dignitaries." The scroll, dated June 7, was signed by the three Commissioners.

Attending the luncheon were Edgar Morris and Mr. Morris' guests, Raymond Muir, Assistant Chief of Protocol; Edward Nash and Charles Spruks, both of the State Department. Also Rear Admiral Glenn Davis, Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, Matthew J. Connelly.

Robert Woods Bliss, J. Fred Roy, Carter Barron, Col. Horace Smith, Col. Robert Guggenheim, Robert V. Fleming, John M. Christie, Thornton W. Owen, Joseph C. McGarraghy, Maurice R. Palmer, Charles Stofberg, William J. McManus, Radford E. Mobley, Col. Jess B. Bennett, Marvin Braverman and John T. O'Rourke.

Swedish Counselor Saying Farewell

THE Swedish Counselor, Ingemar Hagglof, and his pretty wife are leaving Washington soon to return to Stockholm, where Mr. Hagglof will be second man in the Commercial Department of the Foreign Office. Before leaving the country, the Hagglofs are going out to the West Coast for a visit, and they plan to be in Stockholm the beginning of August.

To say farewell, they gave a cocktail party yesterday from 6 to 8 p. m. at their home on 44th pl.

In the gathering were Lieut. Col. Herbert de Schinkel, Mr. and Mrs. Per Lind, Count Adam Moltke-Huitfeldt, Mr. and Mrs. Knut B. Aars and Elovius Mangor of the Norwegian Embassy, Gunnar Seidenfaden of the Danish Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tartiere, George Baker, Mr. and Mrs. John Begg and many more.

Mrs. Begg has as her house guest now Miss Helen Chapin, daughter of the United States Ambassador to the Netherlands and Mrs. Selden Chapin.

Washington is sorry to see Mr. and Mrs. Hagglof leave, as they are one of the youngest and most charming couples in the diplomatic set. While Ambassador Boheman was in Sweden, Mr. Hagglof was charge d'affaires at the embassy.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet and Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton were ranking guests at the dinner last evening given by Senator and Mrs. Edward Martin at the 1925 F Street Club.

Sheila Smith Is Capital's First June Debutante

Glozau

MISS SHEILA MORTON SMITH, first debutante of the June season, who was presented to society yesterday at a garden tea given by her grandmother, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis. Miss Smith has just graduated from St. Timothy's at Catonsville, Md., and will spend the summer at Southampton, Long Island

By Marie McNair

FIRST of the June debutantes to make her bow was Miss Sheila Morton Smith who met "old Washington" yesterday at her debut tea, given by her grandmother, Mrs. Dwight Davis.

It was a garden fete at Mrs. Davis' house on S street and Hollywood couldn't have done better with the setting. A gentle breeze stirred the old trees, fanned through the border of pink and scarlet geraniums. A waning sun cast its gentle rays over the throng and red-and-white striped garden umbrellas shaded small tables which dotted the lawn. On the terrace Alexander Haas and his Budapest Gypsy ensemble, from New York, in gold-trimmed scarlet uniforms, played Viennese waltzes and Hungarian gypsy melodies throughout the afternoon.

Miss Smith, daughter of Paul Morton Smith and Mrs. John Durant of New York, is fresh from the schoolroom, having graduated last week from St. Timothy's in Catonsville, Md. She has a delightful six months to anticipate, for she'll spend the summer at Southampton, Long Island, with her grandmother and go with her to Europe in the fall.

Wore Ankle-Length Organza Frock

TALL, slim and pretty, the debutante wore a full-skirted ankle-length frock of white organza with shadow embroidery over pale beige and a wide sash of pale blue satin looped at the side. She held a round bouquet of white carnations in her hands.

Mrs. Davis, whose youthful good looks belie her age, wore beige chiffon made with high round neck and a flaring skirt.

Lured by a perfect June day, guests decided the garden was the place to be yesterday. But there was a tea table set up in the dining room with more than a dozen distinguished ladies taking their turns at the tea and coffee services.

Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State, was among those assisting. Others were Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Clark Clifford, Mrs. Raymond Cox, in a full dark blue linen frock and her hair bound in a wide black velvet ribbon; Mrs. David Edward Finley, Mrs. Lee Warren, Mrs. William McKee Dunn in a feathery black and white print; Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. Arthur Fowler and Mrs. Ray Atherton. Mrs. William McChesney Martin, daughter of the late Dwight Davis, one time Secretary of War and donor of the Davis Cup, assisted her stepmother, and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth also were asked to do their bit.

Groups Gathered At Garden Table

CONGENIAL groups soon gathered at the garden tables to sip ice cream, coffee, champagne or practically anything else they could ask for. At each table was a bouquet sent the debutante—one an old fashioned lace paper holder filled with forget-me-nots and yellow roses. At another table, pink gardenias, and at still another, a round bouquet of pale pink carnations.

Mrs. Stanley Reed found a place and stuck to it with Mrs. Hiram Bingham among those at the same table. Justice Reed joined the group later. The Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, found friends everywhere and a foursome were Brig. Gen. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, USAF, and his pretty Nora, both suntanned from sun and sea at Sea Island, Ga.; and Gen. Robert G. Ervin, recently back from Alaska, and Mrs. Ervin.

Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, was there and the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens, soon to sail for their homeland, were making their adieux. Saw the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, Mrs. J. William Fulbright in a white frock with gray coin dots; Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth in a wide-brimmed hat and summery print.

Prints were popular yesterday. Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, there with the Justice, wore black and white; Mme. de Kauffman, wife of the Danish Ambassador, topped her black and white sheer frock with a cartwheel black horsehair hat; Mrs. Arthur Krock's white frock had a pin-dot of black and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, back from New York for yesterday's party and that of the National Academy of Arts and Letters today, was handsome in a silk Persian print.

Friends Chat as They Come and Go

COL. ROBERT GUGGENHEIM was hurrying Polly Guggenheim off to join Comdr. Donald MacDonald, the skipper of the presidential yacht, the Williamsburg, and Mrs. MacDonald, for dinner and a cruise down the river. Raymond Cox was chatting with Mrs. Eugene Carusi, who wore a slim shell-pink accordion pleated gown and a tiny bonnet-like hat trimmed with blue forget-me-nots.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer were there and with them their daughter, Mrs. Philip Graham. Mrs. James Barnes was gloating over the fact that she's a grandmother for the first time, her son and daughter-in-law being parents of a son born on Monday.

Then there were Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle—she in sheer black with a wide hat; Mrs. Harold Walker, also wearing summer black; Sir William Lawrie Welsh and Lady Welsh wearing emerald green brocade taffeta; former Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer in a garden party black frock trimmed with bands of ecru lace; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State, in dark blue; Mrs. Joseph Casey and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Davis' next-door neighbor, who has leased her house to the new Secretary of the Air Force, Thomas K. Finletter.

Dean Suter, Miss Elmer, Will Marry

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Beebe Elmer of New York announce the engagement of their daughter, Alice Hoyt, to the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the National Cathedral in Washington.

The bride-elect is a member of the Junior League of Washington. She was graduated from Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. During the war she served as nurse's aide at the New York Hospital. Miss Elmer is a granddaughter of Mrs. Herbert Charles Elmer of Ithaca, N. Y., and the late Professor Elmer and the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman Haight of New York.

Dean Suter was graduated from Harvard University and from the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. From 1933 to 1944 he was rector of the Church of the Epiphany, New York. He is custodian of the Standard Book of Common Prayer in the United States.

The wedding will take place this summer.

Leave for Swampscott, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hechinger have left for an extended stay at Swampscott, Mass., where they have opened their summer home for the season.

U. S. Attorney to Wed in Fall

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Wells of Alexandria, Va., announce the engagement of her sister, Miss Roberta Faith Patterson, of Washington, to Stafford Robert Grady of Washington and Grand Rapids, Mich.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Franklin Patterson of New York City and Atlantic City. She is the granddaughter of the late Brig. Gen. Robert F. Patterson, USA. Miss Patterson was educated at Holy Spirit Convent School and the New Jersey College of Commerce.

Mr. Grady, who is the son of Mrs. Sidney J. Darling and the late Stafford R. Grady of Grand Rapids, Mich., is an assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia. He attended Aquinas College and was graduated from George Washington University and Law Schpol. He is a member of Sigma Nu social fraternity and Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

The wedding will take place in early autumn.

Mrs. Fred Vinson To Be Guest

Mrs. Emil Edward Hurja, general chairman of the National Society of Arts and Letters annual scholarship award benefit, has announced that Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, will be an honor guest at the benefit to be held on June 8 from 2 to 6:30 at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Alben Barkley, wife of the Vice President, will also be honored.

The public is invited to attend the sale of art works and witness the presentation of schalorships to talented young Washington students. The scholarships will be presented by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and Mrs. William Henry Hessick to the students after they have displayed their talents. Scholarships will be awarded in the fields of art, music, literature, drama and the ballet.

The Junior Chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters will make five awards to senior high school students—all in the field of art.

Young Mary Says:

Be DAD Certain! . . .

A lot of backyards are going to be dug up in the still of night! That's Father's Day night, June 18th . . . as the poor pops bury some of the fantastic loot that's passed on as gifts.

So, for that problem-child man, I'd like to give you a few pertinent suggestions:

For the sleeping beauty male . . . the guy who naps when he's not snoozing—what else but cool, rumple-proof pajamas. And say . . . you can discard your ironing board if you give him NYLON PAJAMAS, $12.95. Choice of colors . . . mighty bargain-wise, too.

Those clumsy, all-thumb men who pop their buttons every time they put on a shirt will find pure pleasure in a ZIPPER SHIRT, $3.95. White, with full length, concealed zipper, snaps at cuffs and collar.

Has pop got a case of wanderlust? Nothing better than colorful neckties that depict famous WORLD TOUR SCENES, $2.00.

Make sure you have all of his sizes—right now ask him for a list. It will help also to know his weight and height.

Strong, silent types may not give you any inkling of what they want . . . so play it safe . . . with a gift certificate. By the way, I found all these items and many more at THE YOUNG MEN'S SHOP . . . 1319 F Street.

Shoppingly yours,

Mary

Your Figure, Madame

Grace a State of Mind; Posture Reflects Courage

By Ida Jean Kain

IF I can help you catch that quickening of the spirit that Martha Graham has about posture, you need never again lack confidence. As I sat talking with Miss Graham, I wished all my readers could listen in, for she was truly an inspiration. She deserves all the laurels she has received in modern dance. Next best, I'll try to give you what she gave me.

"Do women lose their figures because they do not move correctly, because they settle for poor posture, or because they fail to exercise?" was my opening question.

"Poor posture is to blame for most poor figures," she said thoughtfully, "but far more important is what lies back of poor posture."

Correction Begins Within

She explained that posture is a result of the way we think and feel inside. The body is quick to register fear or a feeling of inferiority—but it is just as responsive to a feeling of courage and confidence. So the correction must begin within. It is not primarily a mechanical thing—it is a feeling.' ' '

"Beautiful movement is natural, but very often we lose this sure, pure use of the body early in life. One reason is that we put our emphasis on so many external things and forget the importance of our own inner selves. Grace is a state of being, and that comes only with development. Another reason for the loss of beautiful movement is tension . . . straining to live in the tomorrow, when the secret is to live joyously this day."

I asked our authority to name someone whose posture expressed this state of being, and without a moment's hesitation she named Helen Keller—who has the most beautiful posture of any woman she knows—and also Katherine Cornell. She believes Miss Keller has such a beautiful posture because she must be aware every moment and because she is so deeply joyous inside. And that the secret of Miss Cornell's grace is the sense of eagerness with which she moves. Awareness, joy, eagerness.

Don't Become Resigned

Now back to figure. Miss Graham thinks the reason so many middle-aged women settle for poor figures is that they consider it inevitable, and become resigned. That's all wrong. Nothing is inevitable . . . certainly losing one's figure isn't!

What should the woman with an indifferent posture and poor figure do to correct these faults? She should take a mental grip on herself and refuse to be complacent. It's when the mind assumes a complacency that the body registers "I give up." It means she is no longer trying. The only failure is not trying. Freedom comes only through discipline.

The secret is to have the courage to feel and to want to continue to grow mentally . . . and to keep that sense of eagerness about life. All this will be reflected in your posture . . . then all movement will be beautiful, for it stems from what you are.

Catholic U. Sets Workshop in Nursing

A workshop in nursing education will be held at Catholic University from June 9 to June 20. Nursing educators will study various approaches to the development of basic curriculum in nursing under the direction of Miss Kathryn Cafferty, assistant professor of nursing education at the university.

Particular attention will be paid to the effect personal relationships have on the nurse in her work with the patient, as well as the effect of inter-personal relationships in the family and community.

Speakers, seminar leaders and consultants who are to participate in the workshop include Miss Anne Kirchner, director of nursing at Chicago Lying-In Hospital and Dispensary, the University of Chicago; Miss Mary Maher, instructor in nursing education and supervisor of field work in medical and surgical nursing, Teachers' College, Columbia University; Miss Kathleen Newton, assistant professor, Cornell University, New York Hospital School of Nursing, and Sister Margaret Louise, C. S. J., chairman of the child study department and director of the preschool, St. Joseph's College for Women, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Members of the faculty of Catholic University who will participate include Miss Barbara T. Lanigan, assistant professor of pediatric nursing; Miss Ann McQuade, assistant professor, mental hygiene in public health nursing; Miss Mary M. Redmond, assistant professor and director, advanced psychiatric nursing programs.

Custom-Fitted Bra . . .

We analyze your figure, then choose from many Lov-e' styles, over 500 sizes, the perfect bra for you.

Then we record your Lov-e' bra number—and alterations — for our files, so you can order again —in person, by phone or mail.

We fit it to your individual measurements, stitching, tucking to assure personal figure beauty.

We check your bra after its first washing, to be sure it still gives you the utmost in beauty, comfort. No charge.

Only when a bra is carefully chosen for you from a wide range of figure types, only when it is custom-fitted personally to your individual measurements, can you be sure it's the bra for you—that it molds you, flatters you—just the way your figure requires it. That's why these famed, wonder-working Lov-e' bras — fitted inch by inch to your personal proportions by Lov-e' experts — mean figure perfection.

Broadway, the Street of Dreams

The cast of "South Pacific" (including stagehands and musicians) are these kind of people: They gave a regular performance (without a spectator) the other afternoon so that talented Ray Middleton, Pinza's replacement, would have a performance "under his belt" that night . . . Pinza's gone, but those long lines waiting for the box office to open (every 8 a. m.) are still there . . . All the talk about J. Benny jilting CBS can be debunked with this fact: Benny, Luckies and CBS are married for another 2 yrs. TV, however, could be the loophole NBC might slip thru for "the grab" . . . "Swiss Chris" has big backing from Greta Garbo . . . The MPPA (Motion Picture Producers Ass'n) wires that the report Sinatra will be barred from movies is news to them. Sinatra tells the col'm they are misinformed as Hollywood execs tipped him he is banned—"to appease Senator Johnson, the reformer" . . . Rich-Get-Richer Dep't: At the Starlight Roof opening the door-prize (dinner for 4 at the Waldorf) was won by the Chase Nat'l Bank president.

John Steinbeck and producer E. Kazan have encountered Mexican censorship on the filming of "Zapata." No like El Scripto . . . The Roxy's next ("Night and the City") brings back Richard Widmark, always worth the admission fee himself . . . Some midtown likker shops now feature bottles of wine for a dime. Must need the money . . . In the "Abbie & Slats" comic strip soon General Eisenhower will be featured as one of its characters. By Ike's permish . . . "Who Said That?" is one of the few vaudeo programs blending adultalk and humor. But it remains unsponsored . . . M. Todd has given the Runyon Fund the entire first row of "Peep Show" for the Winter Garden run. Seems like a natural for that famed theater in the hot spell. The gels seem so cool in their figleaves.

Observation: Front pages blast about the Frank Erickson gambling probe and how sinful gaming is—while Time's cover features a stock-ticker Bull and urges readers to bet on the stock market . . . The Roxy stage show now offers a puny half-dozen chorines. Hmf, she-conomy . . . Only one straight comedy clicked big during the 1949-50 season: "The Happy Time" . . . Mrs. FDR's tips to the Republicans (in Cosmopolitan) probably will be ignored. They make sense . . . The big difference in production costs here and in Britain: "Cocktail Party" paid off its London angels in 10 days. Over here it usually takes a year . . . The winner of the Bum-Timing Sweepstakes is the movie that fathered the ditty, "Mule Train." It opened here this week long after the song became No. 1 on the Oblivion Parade.

We have a shop on Madison Avenue that offers cowboy suits for kids at only $100. Hi-yo, Platinum! . . . Those sheau-auff bus drivers are getting to be big bores. Stealing buses, chasing people off (because one bawls them out), et and cetera. Hooray for the Bawler-Outter who represented the rest of us who are fed up with drivers slamming the door in your face just as you breathlessly reach the corner. What the bus company needs most seems to be a psychiatrist for their prima donnas . . . The Talk of the Town still seems to be those delightful INS exclusives of Ingrid and her beautiful bambino . . . John Gunther's "Roosevelt in Retrospect" is an arsenal of facts for mowing down putty-blowers . . . Music via J. Bushkin's piano (at the Park-Sheraton Mermaid Room) is Our Idea of which . . . Big advance gab on "The Next Voice You Hear" film, due soon at the Music Hall . . . Todd Duncan in "Lost in the Stars" is a hurry-up. Leaves soon.

Columbia's new serial, "Superman vs. Atom Man," is expected to gross at least 2 mill . . . The Roy Stevens crew at Roseland embellish the CBS wire . . . Don't miss Toni Arden's "Tonight" platter . . . The proposed bill to outlaw sending of race selections specifies that information "as to probable winners" is out. But nothing is said about "probable losers"—so all you have to do is turn the figures around, you doaps . . . Flagstad's mgr. (Levine) says he's broken off dealing with conductor Mengelberg of Amsterdam "for technical reasons." Levine doesn't mention that Mengelberg was a Nazi collabber and that 3 years ago Queen Wilhelmina withdrew a medal of honor she had awarded him before the war. Put-it-there, Queen! . . . Duell, Sloan & Pearce have censorship jitters over "Mister Jelly Roll," their latest book. Just found out the title's double-meaning.

From a Chatham, Va., reader: "Read you every morning. It is so much nicer to read about New York than to be there" . . . The president of N. Y. Airways is John L. Senior, jr. . . . One of the better books: "Capt. Sam Grant" by Lloyd Lewis. U. S. Grant before he used his initials . . . Diplomats back from Russia told Barnee (the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, maestro) that "Sentimental Journey" is extremely popular in Moscow. All bands play it. They've written Russian wordage to it. Aren't they violating the copyright? . . . A convict serving 25 to 30 (at Clinton Prison) is the composer of a recorded number at RCA-Victor. He is Joe Schumacher, 40, and his tune is titled "Nightwind." It's good . . . D. W. Griffith's widow is working as a secy over at Esquire . . . "A Measure of Freedom" (the book exposing the Hate-Racketeers) listed Frank Lee (Lee Hats) as a backer of Joe Kamp, now under Federal sentence. Mr. Lee has written the author admitting it—"in the belief he was fighting communism." Lee adds he is withdrawing all support . . . President Truman, who was broke before Congress gave him that raise, will have more than $100,000 banked by November, 1952.

Arthur Godfrey's version of "Gone Fishin'" gives every hint of landing right on top of the list soon. The Kenny Freres who wrote it get 6c per copy. They don't care who has The Nielsens and Hoopers so long as they can get the songhit royalties . . . The wordage of the ditty, "Listen to That Bluebird," was auth'd by Tony Casey of the World-Telly-Sun staff . . . Li'l Abner (July 2d) will atomic the Al Capp-Ham Fisher feud all over again. These two "ain't kiddin'"; somebody's gotta get hurt that Sunday before sundown—watch and see. A new Abner kerrickter will be named "Happy Vermin" . . . The newest "find" is 17-year-old Pier Angeli from Sardinia. Only made one film ("Teresa"), and they say she's star-dustuff. Pier has strawberry blonde hair, green orbs, doesn't imbibe or smoke, and Mama goes along on all dates. Goomby, plizz.

Tips on Air Travel

Planes Encourage Trips Abroad

This is the fourth of a series of six installments intended to make your vacation a happier one whether you're going abroad or staying within the U.S.A. These chapters are condensed from "Your Trip Abroad," a book just published by Doubleday & Co.

By Richard Joseph

CHAPTER FOUR

It's no exaggeration to say that the airplane has revolutionized vacation travel just as much as it has modern warfare.

Thanks to our present-day airliners, all of Europe and Latin America are now readily accessible to the two-week vacationist. After all, the great majority of vacations are still of the two-week variety.

Most two-week vacations actually last 16 days, and you can reach most European and Latin-American points by air from most American cities within 24 hours. So you need allot only about two days for round-trip travel to Europe or Latin America, leaving you two full weeks abroad.

Flying to Europe, you have your choice of three American flag lines, American Overseas Airlines, Pan American World Airways, and Trans World Airline. There are seven foreign carriers, depending on where you're going and how you prefer to get there.

You'll find one American line competing with at least one foreign line to most of the popular tourist cities of western Europe. Whether you go on American or foreign lines is pretty much a personal choice, together with the type of plane you prefer.

One fact you can bank on: The transatlantic run is the show window of every airline flying it. Whatever the merits or demerits of their services elsewhere, you'll find their best ships, their finest pilots and crew members, and their most attractive hostesses in their transatlantic service. All have excellent safety records in these runs.

The Latin-American picture is somewhat different. Most of the runs south of the border are practically the exclusive province of Pan American World Airways, its affiliate, Pan American Grace Airways (Panagra), and local subsidiary companies in various Latin-American countries.

Exceptions are the service of Braniff International Airways from the Midwest to Cuba, Canal Zone, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, and Brazil; Chicago and Southern's run to Cuba, Jamaica, and Venezuela; American's Mexico service; Eastern's Puerto Rican flights, and National's run to Cuba.

Most international flights are simplicity itself as far as the passengers are concerned. When flights go as scheduled you have nothing to do, nothing to think about, and no decisions to make from the time that you check in at the airline office or airport until you descend from the airport limousine at your destination.

Important Qualification

You'll notice that I qualified the foregoing with "when flights go as scheduled."

That's an important qualification, because it's only when schedules are interrupted by weather or mechanical difficulties that the generally outstanding airline service sometimes starts to fray. International airlines, very properly, will ground a plane if any danger threatens because of weather or the slightest mechanical difficulty. Nobody in his right mind would question the wisdom of that policy.

Why, then, in the name of all that is holy in public relations, can't the airlines always inform their passengers quickly and completely as soon as any difficulty develops—telling them what is causing the delay, approximately how long a delay is expected, and how soon they expect to be around with the next bulletin?

In all fairness, I know that most airlines are making intensive efforts to improve this weakness.

One of the most beautiful sights of our contemporary world is the lights of a city seen from the air at night. So—scenically speaking—the times just before night landings and just after night take-offs might be the highlights of your trip.

To make the time go more quickly the airlines feed you. Take my word for it that the altitude will do something to your appetite—assuming the flight is smooth—that will amaze you. You'll wake up from a snooze, or look up from your tray, with a roaring appetite.

Where you prefer to sit in a plane will depend pretty much on what sort of person you are, and the mood you're in.

Up front is a perfect place for relaxation from the wild turmoil you've probably been in during those last hectic days just before you left. It's great for uninterrupted sleeping, for reading, and for being by yourself.

Back in the rear of the plane, on the other hand, is the place for you if you want to be at the center of activity, to observe what's going on in the plane all the time, look over your fellow passengers, strike up conversations with them, and get to know the plane crew.

If you've got a squeamish stomach and are not too sure of what sort of air sailor you'll be, then you'll probably be happier up front. There's definitely less movement and sway, if the weather gets a bit bumpy.

About this airsickness business. Odds are something like a hundred to one that you won't be sick. International airliners on long hops fly above most bad weather. Moreover, most over-water flights are as smooth as glass. The air over the ocean at flight altitudes is usually considerably less "bumpy" than air over land.

All technical skill and the tender ministrations notwithstanding, some passengers still manage to worry all during their flight.

"The engine is burning!" The red-hot exhaust manifold always glows cheerily on night flights. When you don't see "the engine burning" at night that's the time to worry.

"An engine is starting to miss! I can tell by the change in the sound!" That change in sound is caused by one of two factors, or maybe by both: your ears responding to pressure difference due to change of altitude, or the different sound made by the adjustable propeller when the pilot changes the pitch, or bite.

These are just a couple of the bogeys that active minds and imaginations can dream up in a plane. But why start dreaming?

Held for Robbery, Man Gets 90 Days For Toting Knife

Raymond Touns, 23, of Richmond, Va., who was chased into the Thirteenth Precinct station and arrested there Sunday, was held under $1500 bond for the grand jury yesterday on robbery charges.

Cornelia Jones, 53, 907 T st. nw., testified in Municipal Court yesterday that Touns snatched her pocketbook. She pursued him, screaming. He ducked into an alley she said, and came out by the steps of the precinct station, where he was arrested.

Police said they searched Touns at the station and found an open pocketknife, and a whisky bottle stuffed tight with rags. Judge Scott yesterday found him guilty of carrying a deadly weapon and sentenced him to serve 90 days in jail on that charge.

Theyre Still Getting Cavalier With Twain

By John Crosby

A NEW NBC program called "Through the Magic Slate" (8 p. m. in New York, Fridays) has ventured into Mark Twain, which must have seemed like a good idea at the time. As things turned out, it might have been better if the network had stuck to the newer classics—Captain Midnight, for example.

The actors selected to play Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn looked older than I do and, believe me, that's vintage. I don't think Twain ever specified just how old either Tom or Huck were but they were well short of middle age. This actor who played Tom—I shall spare his name largely because I don't know it—would have been more properly cast as Marchbanks in "Candida" or, even better, as young Woodley. However, the qualities of countenance and personality which would make an excellent Marchbanks are hardly those that lead toward a good, or even adequate, Tom. This Tom was too doe-eyed for my money and, I'll bet, for Twain's. Any moment I expected him to burst into poetry.

A Sanitary Finn

HUCK was somewhat less adolescent, or, at any rate, he concealed it more skillfully. But he, too, fell far short of reasonable expectations. For one thing, he was the most sanitary Huck Finn of all time, looking as if he'd just been cleaned and pressed. His corncob pipe had a store-bought, machine-tooled air about it, greatly at odds with the hand-wrought jobs Huck used to smoke. Both Tom and Huck looked to my dim eyes like actors dressed for a barn dance rather than the two most famous boys of American fiction.

As for Becky Thatcher—I hate to make a scene about this—she was overage for the part, too and also, I should say, a little overweight for it. I can't imagine Tom standing on his hands for a girl of such dimensions. Injun Joe—to round out this paean of dispraise—was the least laconic Indian I ever laid eyes on. (The Least Laconic Indians are a distant relative of the Choctaws. Their skin is a sickly orange instead of red, they live in apartment houses instead of teepees, and they subsist almost entirely on gin). The actor who took care of this part appeared to be under the impression he was playing Cyrano de Bergerac, acting, as it were, in a manner that could be observed clearly for miles.

The producers didn't tackle all of Tom Sawyer, just the scene in the haunted house. I'm afraid they propose to do some more of it next week. Well, I hate to be so severe with such a laudable effort as that of bringing Tom and Huck to our screens. But if they can't do any better than this they had best leave Tom and Huck on the printed page.

IT'S NOT generally the custom here to lift material out of other television columns but I have been struck rather forcibly by the following lament of a television reviewer who shall be, for the moment, nameless: "It was evident the players (on this television show) had been carefully picked for intelligence and experience. But what were they required to do? Blow up and burst balloons. Draws pigs with their eyes shut. Feed each other blindfolded. Eat a dry biscuit and whistle a tune. When last seen they were merrily tossing an orange in a sheet. It is probable that they enjoyed their outing but it seems to me hard on the viewers, most of whom stopped drawing pigs with their eyes shut several years ago."

It sounds like any number of American shows. But it isn't. The reviewer is C. A. Lejeune of The Observer of London and she is talking about a program on the British Broadcasting Corp. The British, in some respects, appear to be no more mature than we are, possibly a little less so. I've seen several American shows where people are required to draw things with their eyes open. I've not seen anyone required to draw a pig with his eyes shut.

Miss Lejeune threw out one other very sage observation that applies to America as well as to Britain: "It is a fairly safe rule that when the B. B. C. is having the most fun its customers are having singularly little."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It Takes That Woman's Touch to Foil Mere Man

It was starting to drizzle, the evening rush hour was beginning, and the girl trying to hail a cab in front of Ceres was having no luck whatever.

A couple of empties came by, but the drivers were uniformly unable to see one lone passenger.

Down the street came three women. They recognized the girl at the curb, exchanged greetings, and tried to talk her into going to the show with them.

"No," she wailed, "I've got to get home to get dressed for a date, and I can't get a cab."

"No cab?" murmured one of the newcomers. "C'mon, girls, let's get her a cab."

The four of them stepped out a pace from the curb and almost as if by magic an empty taxi slid to a stop before them. The girl got in, her three friends bade her good bye, and the driver looked as if he was about to explode.

Then, realizing he'd been booby-trapped, he grinned acknowledgment of defeat, and said: "Ya got me. Where to, lady?"

PROFESSIONAL KNOW-HOW

Earl H. (Pappy) Gammons, CBS vice-president for Washington and one of our town's better story-tellers, recalls the wonderful tale of the two psychiatrists who fell to talking shop.

"What's your secret?" asked the younger man. "I'm exhausted at the end of a day's work, but in spite of listening to patients who talk talk talk, you're as fresh as a daisy. How do you do it?"

"Who listens?" shrugged the older man.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four - month - old kitten." (Johnson 2-5231 after 6:30 p. m.)

"Playful black kitten with four white feet." (Owens 5895).

"Housebroken 10-week-old feline gentleman, tiger striped; will deliver." (Warfield 9070.)

"Five playful 5-week-old kittens; will deliver in Bethesda." (Wisconsin 0468.)

"Two black Siamese kittens, 2 month old." (Oliver 7691, evenings.)

"Fifty detective mystery novels; complete set 1949 Our World magazines." (Decatur 8504.)

"Darling 5-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 9443.)

THE DIPLOMATIC WAY

A few days ago near 16th and Columbia rd. nw., several citizens complained about a car with its right front wheel over the curb line.

"Diplomatic tags," muttered an irate citizen. "I hope he gets a ticket."

The driver and the policeman on the beat arrived at about the same time. Both were the soul of courtesy.

The diplomat said he was sorry that his car appeared to be illegally parked. But he explained that he had left his front wheels turned in (as was evident) and that the car behind apparently pushed him a bit, causing the DPL auto to roll over the curb, which is very low at that point.

The explanation was logical, and the diplomat seemed completely sincere. The cop was satisfied, and everybody went on his way without further ado.

As pointed out in this space before, our diplomatic colony does not abuse its immunity in traffic matters. The culprits, almost invariably, are the chauffeurs, messengers and sundry other employes—most of them American citizens. I guess they're just too human (or maybe too American) to resist a golden opportunity to thumb their noses at traffic laws.

At any rate, you might be interested to know that the entire diplomatic colony has been quietly circularized with a plea for strict adherence to local customs and regulations and several embassies have already cracked down on negligent underlings.

The Good Neighbor Policy, fortunately, is a two-way street.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

F. W. M. notices that when folks say they're going to be "frank," they're usually getting ready to tell you something unpleasant about yourself.

NO HEEL HE

Samuel Guter of 1901 Wyoming ave. nw. thinks that if these lines could be set to music, they'd make a fine solo for the shoe horn:

The cobbler was, in times now past,
Awl wise in his pursuit;
An artisan at bench or last,
The sole of wit to boot.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Groups Assail Basing Point Bill

By Drew Pearson

Grim-faced leaders of small business, labor and farm cooperatives made a special plea against the basing point bill at a recent closed-door meeting with Democratic Chairman Bill Boyle.

BOYLE

The session was opened with the blunt question: "Do you want a Republican Congress next year? One sure way is to let the President sign the basing point bill."

"If Mr. Truman's messages on small business mean anything," continued gravel-voiced George Burger, of the National Federation of Independent Business, "he'll veto this bill. His program is absolutely worthless if this bill becomes law, and small business knows it."

"Farmers, consumers and small business will pay higher freight costs, if this bill is signed," threw in Wallace Campbell of the Cooperative League.

Others in the delegation agreed vigorously. They were: Don Montgomery of the United Auto Workers, George Fretas of the Retail Druggists, Ed Rowe of the United Wholesale Grocers, and William Marsh of the National Association of Retail Tire Dealers. Boyle appeared to be impressed that these groups, usually following separate paths, were lined up together.

"How does it happen Democratic Senators are doing all the hard work for this Republican bill?" asked Montgomery of the Auto Workers. He referred to Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Democratic whip Francis Myers of Pennsylvania, and Herbert O'Conor of Maryland.

Boyle's Reaction

"I just don't know," replied Boyle sadly. "The action of Administration Senators for the basing point bill surprises me."

"The Democrats are the best ball carriers the Republicans could hope for on this deal," observed Burger caustically.

The small business representative also reminded Boyle that South Carolina's Burnet Maybank, chairman of the "so-called small business committee," voted for basing point side by side with GOP chiefs Robert Taft and Ken Wherry.

The delegation pointed out that the basing point bill would raise the cost of living, that big steel and cement interests would profit from the formula at the expense of other economic segments, and that Mr. Truman's action on the bill was as much a test as the Kerr gas bil.

At the end of the session, Chairman Boyle said: "This has been an education for me, and I'm convinced you're right. I'll do my best to persuade the President to veto the bill."

Trygve Lie, Truman

Here is the inside story of what happened when U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie met with President Truman and Secretary Acheson following Lie's return from Moscow.

Lie first reported on the strong desire for peace which he found everywhere from Moscow to Washington; then asked the Pesident to consider sending Acheson to a special meeting of the United Nations Security Council in Geneva this summer, a meeting which he said was imperative to keep the United Nations from collapsing.

Mr. Truman's reaction was immediate. He promptly said he could do no such thing: that it would be a cruel hoax to play on the American people when there is absolutely no chance of agreement with Russia.

The only thing Russia understands, the President argued, is force, and the West is going to build up its own force until Russia realizes the democracies mean business. After that, perhaps a meeting with Russia might produce some good.

As it is now, Truman told the U. N. Secretary General, Russia is boycotting the United Nations because it won't seat Communist China—just like a little boy who says he won't play in the game unless he can be captain of the team. In contrast, Truman said, the United States has attended every meeting, never used its veto and is working night and day for peace.

Trygve Lie left the meeting convinced there is absolutely no chance for an East-West meeting in the near future.

Merry-Go-Round

The President would like to appoint former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes to the world power conference in London if he would go . . . Reports from Argentina are that Ambassador Stanton Griffis is doing a good job. However, he is pulling wires for the top diplomatic post—London—which he will not get . . . The lobbying of Samuel P. Haines to abolish the excise tax on night clubs has backfired. After the Ways and Means Committee learned that Haines was to get a $100,000 fee if the tax was abolished, they decided to reconsider.

Today at CENTER MARKET CITY
...with Pat Parker

EVERY YEAR, along about this time, we bring you news from Arthur Rodgers' stand —314-316. For this stand has one of the most wonderful assortments of cold meats that you'll find anywhere in the country.

Planning a picnic this week-end? Going fishing? Or perhaps you're just taking it easy with a backyard supper on Sunday. Let us lead you to the stand where you'll find all sorts of delicacies.

A FORMCROFT or Iowa loaf is certainly worth investigating. Then, there's Mr. Rodgers' baked Dutch loaf and baked pepper and clove loaf. Try the goodness of an all-pork spiced lunch meat, pressed ham and his famous Milwaukee lunch roll.

Certainly, you'll find Italian salami, Lebanon dry bologna and regular bologna. You'll also find goose liver-style braunschweiger and knockwurst.

Tiny frankfurters also show up here, usually on week-ends, and they're really good. These are but a few of the fascinating items you'll find at this stand.

MR. RODGERS, one of the standowners who has been at Center Market City for a long time, also specializes in church picnics and suppers for large groups.

If you've been caught with the job of food chairman for a benefit, you know it's a job. But here's where Mr. Rodgers comes to your rescue. All you need do is let him know the number you expect for a supper or picnic, and he'll take care of the right amounts for you. He's an old hand at this sort of thing, so you can rely on him to make your party quite a success.

Don't you believe that cold cuts are monotonous! Just drop by and view the exciting items at this stand.

CENTER MARKET CITY is soft-shell crab headquarters this week-end. The famous crabs are now coming in from the Chesapeake Bay regions, and how good they are. We don't have to tell the natives about their goodness, but if you've recently moved to Washington, we heartily recommend them. They're specialties of this region. Javins' and Thompson's seafood stands are where you'll find them.

HAVE YOU had lima beans yet this season? Or corn-on-the-cob? Or fresh peas and new potatoes? Or yellow wax beans? Perhaps you go for strawberry shortcake. Or how about watermelon? Yes, they're beginning to come in on market. The South is sending them along, and they'll be at their height around the Fourth of July.
